We fear that the President's small increase in the tax on cream will not satisfy the tariff boosters in Congress who seem determined to make the duty on the milk of human kindness prohibitive.

• • • •

The President applies a small flaxseed poultice to the farm boil.

• • • •

Joe Robinson's charge that old-fashioned log-rolling has been injected into consideration of the tariff would be more startling if it had ever been taken out.

• • • •

Log-rolling is the way the other fellow gets what he wants in a tariff bill.

• • • •

The Senate fixes at $12,000 the salary of the chairman of the farm board who will have charge of the $500,000,000 revolving fund, but can a good reliable Whirling Dervish be hired for that sum?

• • • •

The Senate passes the debenture grab, and it now goes to a hotter place than Washington will be in August when the conferees hold their inquest over the corpse.

• • • •

President Hoover goes down the street and meets the high cost of living half way.

• • • •

Tennessee textile strikers under arrest are freed by the magistrate on the ground that they hadn't broken any law. Some of these backward Southern communities have a lot to learn before they can handle a cotton strike the way they handle a steel strike around Pittsburgh.

• • • •

Lloyd George promises to wipe out unemployment in England by borrowing the money to hire folks to go to work. Where the late Wilkins Micawber made his great mistake was in not running for premier.

• • • •

The country slickers of the farm bloc put it all over the city boobs.

• • • •

The truth of the matter is that the direct election of Senators has had the effect of making a Senator a more undignified scrambler for the favor of the populace than members of the House, and a far more rapacious one, with just enough of their once august body coming up for election every two years to counteract the effect of a six-year term.

• • • •

Now, over in the House, for their part, the greedy boys gather around the tariff grub licking their hungry chops, like Oliver Twist—"Please, sir, I want some more" . . . "Compose yourself, Bumble," said Mr. Limbkins, "and answer me distinctly. Do I understand that he asked for more after he had eaten the supper allotted by the dietary?" It will be recalled that, in the opinion of this estimable gentleman in the white waistcoat, "that boy will be hung!"

• • • •

Speaking of farm relief, President Hoover boosts the tariff rate on window glass, and we hope to goodness none of it finds its way into a greenhouse.

• • • •

President Hoover's appointment of Maj. Gen. Patrick to the Public Utilities Commission is said to have almost convinced the politicians that he is laboring under the old-fashioned theory that public office is a public trust.

The arrest of 40 Mexican insurgents indicates that the revolution can now be handled on the basis of a mere riot.

The crisis in the reparations agreement at Paris will come now as soon as the experts have examined what they have done and ascertain whether they understand it.

300 STRIKERS SEIZED IN RIOT AT RAYON MILL

MENACING BAYONETS FLASHED BY TROOPS

Policeman Who Trained Gun on Mob Arrested and Jailed.

WOMAN CUT BY GLASS IN CLIMBING ON AUTO

Prisoners Later Released; Rumors Heard of Declaring Martial Law.

Elizabethton, Tenn., May 14 (A.P.).—Disorders in connection with the strike of several thousand textile workers here reached a climax today with the arrest of more than 300 strikers on charges of intimidating employes returning to work in the two affected plants, and tonight talk of martial law was heard.

National Guardsmen and special officers redoubled their vigilance to prevent a recurrence of the near riot, in which fist fights figured and there was frequent use of sticks by angered strikers and loyal workers. Threatening bayonets were flashed by the guardsmen.

Bill Fair, special policeman, sworn in secretly with many other officers recently, arrested 150 of the strikers this morning after, he said, they stopped buses filled with workers riding to the plants. The crowd began shouting and threatening him, and a company of guardsmen rushed to his aid.

Jail Is Too Small.

Since the jail was too small to accommodate them, the strikers were held in the Carter County courtroom for two hours. They were released by Attorney General Ben Allen after he warned them to leave other workers alone and threatened them with re-arrest if the disorders occurred again.

Fair was charged with "attempt to commit murder," was bound to the grand jury and was in jail tonight on default of bond. The strikers charged he violated the law by training a gun upon those he arrested.

Others were arrested on the road to Bristol and at other points where disturbances were reported. A woman, Laura Johnson, was cut about the hands when she climbed upon an automobile filled with strikebreakers.

Hurling of Rock Starts Riot.

Soon after the largest group was arrested by Fair, civil authorities announced the strikers would be taken to Jonesboro, in an adjoining county. The strikers, herded into tightly jammed groups, shouted, cursed and threatened their captors. Some one hurled a rock and the riot started.

Guard officers ordered their men to take any measures necessary. Highways into the town were blocked by armed cordons. The crowd about the guardsmen increased to some 500 men and women. Magistrate George Ryan was asked to prepare mittimus papers so that the strikers could be removed. He refused, saying it would cause trouble. Some hours afterward Gen. Allen released them.

Twenty-two strikers arrested yesterday for alleged intimidation were arraigned today but their cases were continued until Thursday.

Both the American Bemberg silk mill and the Glanzstoff Corporation rayon plant resumed operations last week after Dr. Arthur Mothwurf, president of both companies, announced the textile union, which was formed at the outbreak of a previous strike several weeks ago, would not be recognized.

The plants are gradually resuming operations with nonunion labor re-

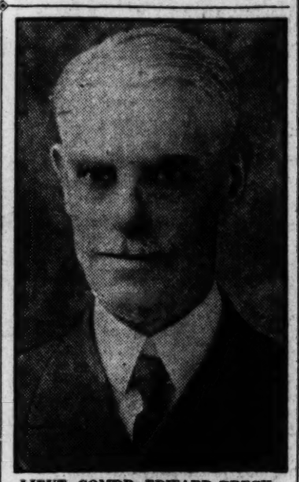
Spy, Adventurer Dies After Life of Daring

Lieut. Comdr. Breck Aided U. S. in Spanish War as Secret Agent.



LIEUT. COMDR. EDWARD BRECK.

Lieut. Comdr. Edward Breck, writer, sportsman and wartime spy, who left Washington a few weeks ago for his summer home at South Milford, Nova Scotia, died at the latter place from heart disease Monday night, it was learned in the Capital yesterday.

Commander Breck's death brought to an end what is probably one of the most romantic and varied careers outside of fiction. His adventures, which led him to all parts of the world, began when he was Berlin correspondent for the New York Herald and the New York Times during the final twenty years of the last century.

Eventually Commander Breck decided to give up newspaper work and try the diplomatic service. He became vice consul general in Berlin. This life appeared too tame for him, and when war broke out with Spain he became a spy in the latter country.

The reputation he built up for himself as a spy lifted Commander Breck into the Secret Service during the World War. He was in Argentina for a year. His exploits are recounted by Secretary Daniels in a book on the World War.

Commander Breck was a naval attache in Portugal and for four or five

POLICE SEIZE FIFTY IN GAMBLING FORAY

Raiders Trap Men Seeking to Escape From Fifteenth Street Building.

PARAPHERNALIA IS TAKEN

Swooping down on the building at 1021 Fifteenth street northwest, within sight of the Department of Justice Building, a police raiding squad early last night seized alleged gambling paraphernalia and arrested 50 men. Two of those arrested were charged with setting up a gaming table and held for $2,000 bond, one was charged with permitting gaming and released on $100 bond, nine were held for investigation, two were accused of being drunk and the others were released under orders to appear in Police Court today as witnesses.

Those charged are:

William S. Harvard, 54, of 1525 I street northwest, and Carl Benchert, 30 years old, 5016 Illinois avenue northwest, charged with setting up a gaming table.

Harry Miller, 35, 1734 P street northwest, charged with permiting gaming.

Thomas Harlow, 23, 1405 Monroe street northwest; Eric Bobbery, 38, 600 Twentieth street northwest; Ralph Duvall, 32, 414 Tenth street southeast; F. R. Miller, 50, 1410 M street northwest; Mitchell Walter, 52, 1219 K street northwest; Henry Platt, 65, 402 Twelfth street northwest; Perry Sebol, 29, 601 Norton street northwest; C. L. Jones, 25, 511 Fourteenth street northwest, and Jacob Schieck, 35, 1815 L street northwest, charged with investigation.

John Paul Mudd, 29, of Valley Vista, Va., and J. R. Glover, 32, of 204 Eleventh street northwest, were charged with being drunk.

The raiders were led by Capt. O. T. Davis, commander of the Second Precinct. His men, he said, had been watching the place some days, in that time gaining information sufficient to warrant a raid. Capt. Davis said the establishment formerly was located at 1018 Fourteenth street northwest, but moved during the police activity against gaming establishments several months ago.

Capt. Davis reported that when he and several of his men rapped on the front door most of those inside attempted to escape through the rear exit, but found they were trapped by other policemen. The doors were then opened and the police permitted to enter. All found in the house were taken to the Second Precinct Station. Those questioned who talked freely were permitted to leave, with instructions to appear today in Police Court. Those

$1,000,000 LIBEL SUIT FILED BY E. B. M'LEAN

Publisher Charges Philadelphia Record With Scandal in Capital Action.

DINNER STORY SAID FALSE

Edward Beale McLean, president and publisher of The Washington Post, filed suit for $1,000,000 in the District Supreme Court yesterday, charging libel, against the Philadelphia Record Co., of Philadelphia, publisher of the Philadelphia Record.

Mr. McLean's suit was filed through his attorneys, Wilton J. Lambert, R. H. Yeatman and George E. Fraser, as a result of an article published in and by the Philadelphia Record Monday.

The article in question referred to a dinner at the Belgian Embassy, to news and editorial matter published in The Post concerning the Belgian Ambassador, and declared that McLean had been "squelched" by President Hoover.

Mr. McLean says, in part, in his declaration:

"The plaintiff did not attend a dinner at the Belgian Embassy referred to in the article hereinafter complained of and did not at such a dinner dine 'too well' and did not annoy any guests at such dinner nor shock said guests and did not subject the Belgian Ambassador to embarrassment by reason of his conduct and was not requested to leave such dinner."

The declaration continues that "the said Washington Post did not print any outburats against Prince de Ligne at the instigation or request of the plaintiff nor as a result of any alleged conduct of the plaintiff or action of the said Belgian Ambassador at said alleged dinner."

The plaintiff declares, further, that he "was not 'squelched' by President Hoover by reason of any misconduct or any action on the part of the plaintiff and was not by any action of said President Hoover 'put in his place.'"

The libel which Mr. McLean charges in the declaration is described therein as "false, wicked, malicious, scandalous and defamatory." The declaration also points out that a photograph of the plaintiff was published with the article attacked. Damages amounting to $1,000,000, besides costs, are sought.

POLICE ARREST MAN AS DRIVER IN DEATH CHASE

Prisoner Is Jailed in City After Pursuit Crash Kills Dry Agent.

MACHINE IDENTIFIED BY LICENSE, CLAIM

Conflicting Reports Told in Officials' Accident Near Berwyn, Md.

CHARGES UNDECIDED IN MUDDLE OF CASE

Fatal Wreck Is Declared Due to Bumping by Vehicle Traveling Behind.

Arrested last night in downtown Washington, while on foot, as a fugitive from justice, Edward Martin, 24 years old, colored, 1523 Eleventh street northwest, is said by Lieut. Edward J. Kelly, chief of the homicide squad, to have been identified as the driver of a suspected rumrunning auto in pursuit of which another machine occupied by prohibition agents was wrecked near Berwyn, Md., early yesterday morning, resulting in fatal injuries to Dano N. Jackley, 48 years old, one of the agents.

Martin, who declined to make any statement to District police, and who also refused to accompany officers into Maryland, where the fatal accident occurred, was held overnight at First Precinct pending decision of authorities on the disposition of his case. Police say they know where the auto in question is located, but have not seized it.

Conflicting reports on the actual cause of the accident in which Jackley was hurt, and considerable indecision on the part of officials as to what charge may or may not be placed against Martin have added to the muddled situation in an already complex case.

License Numbers Learned.

During the 15-mile chase from Laurel, Md., to Berwyn, Md., at which point the accident occurred, prohibition agents claim they were close enough to the pursued car to get the license numbers. It was through the tracing of these numbers that Martin was arrested, police say.

The license number as reported by the dry agents was U-7979 of the District of Columbia. This, records show, was issued to Aaron Trachtenberg, 29,200 Massachusetts avenue, who operates a tire shop at which Martin is employed. In checking auto records, however, police learned that license S-5659 had also been issued for the same car and that U-7979 was supposed to be a duplicate for the S-5659 plate. Trachtenberg told police he bought the car from Alice Rosaco, 1249 G street southeast, to whom license S-1234 had been issued. Records of the finance company, however, show this deal was never legally completed, police assert.

With Martin's refusal to go into Maryland without extradition papers, the question of charges he may face is puzzling officials. First reports indicated he might be charged with manslaughter in connection with Jackley's death, but reports on the accident conflict and police doubt such a charge is warranted.

State Police Seek Details.

State police of Maryland at the Laurel station said they would have to

FARM AID BILL PASSES, 54 TO 33, AS SENATORS KEEP DEBENTURE PLAN

Administration Bloc Fails to Defeat Proposal in Long Battle.

NEW MEASURE BEARS WEIGHT OF REVISIONS

Progressive Republicans and Democrats Vote Plan to Victory.

FUND OF HALF BILLION IS PROVIDED IN ACTION

Legislation, Given Conferees, May Be Long Delayed Before Report.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The Senate yesterday passed the farm bill, 54 to 33, with the much controverted debenture plan still intact. As passed it could hardly be called the administration's fulfillment of its promise of farm relief, because the administration senators with but few exceptions, disdainfully voted against it.

For better or worse, the farmers owe the Democrats and Progressive Republicans for what they get in that bill.

The measure now goes to the House, from which it will bounce right back. It may or may not be significant that only two of the five Senate conferees favor the debenture. Norris, of Nebraska, and Smith, of South Carolina. The other conferees named were McNary, who had the bill in charge and Capper, Republicans, and Ransdell, Democrat.

21 Republicans Favor Bill.

Of the 54 votes for the bill, there were 21 Republicans and 33 Democrats, and of those there were 8 Republicans and 1 Democrat, who voted against the debenture several days ago. Two Democrats and 21 Republicans voted against the measure.

The vote follows:

For the bill, Republicans—Blaine, Borah, Brookhart, Capper, Cousens, Cutting, Frazier, Howell, Johnson, La Follette, McMaster, McNary, Norbeck, Norris, Nye, Pine, Schall, Shortridge, Steiwer, Thomas of Idaho, Vandenberg—21.

Democrats — Ashurst, Barkley, Black, Blease, Broussard, Caraway, Connally, Dill, Fletcher, George, Glass, Harris, Harrison, Hawes, Hayden, Heflin, McKellar, Overman, Pittman, Ransdell, Robinson of Arkansas; Sheppard, Simmons, Smith, Steck, Stephens, Swanson, Thomas of Oklahoma, Trammell, Tydings, Tyson, Walsh of Montana, Wheeler—33.

Against, Republicans — Allen, Bingham, Burton, Dale, Deneen, Edge, Fess, Gillett, Glenn, Goff, Gould, Greene, Hale, Hastings, Hatfield, Hebert, Keau, Keyes, Moses, Oddie, Patterson, Phipps, Reed, Robinson of Indiana, Sackett, Smoot, Townsend, Warren, Waterman, Watson, Walcott—31.

Democrats—Wagner, Walsh of Massachusetts—2.

Paired — King (Democrat), against; Lendrick (Democrat), for.

Many Amendments Included.

Aside from the debenture provision, the bill was laden with amendments that must be acted upon by the conferees, but only one is considered of particular importance. It is the amendment placing the salary of the chairman of the proposed farm board at $12,000 annually. As passed by the House and in accord with the President's desires, the question of the chairman's salary was left to the discretion of the President in order that he could get an outstanding man. As indicative of how this proposal was received in the Senate, however, even Senator McNary was against it.

Senator Copeland, of New York, and other senators lost their fight to exclude deciduous fruits from the operation of the measure.

Aside from the debenture plan, the bill sets up the machinery to relieve

Zeppelin Flight to U. S. Delayed by Paris Order

Start Made Impossible Before Tomorrow, Says Eckener.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, May 14 (A.P.).—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin will start its flight early Thursday morning and not tomorrow, and whether it attempts a two-hour dash across France depends on the weather.

Announcement was made late tonight that permission of the French government to fly over its soil, which Dr. Hugo Eckener had said had not come to him, although he asked for it two weeks ago, was received by the dirigible commander at 10 o'clock tonight. The condition was attached that the flight be made between 7 a. m. and 9 a. m. Officers of the airship declared it was impossible to assemble their crew in time for a start tomorrow that would enable them to conform to this rule.

Dr. Eckener tonight believed that the violent storm over the English Channel might subside in another 24 hours, so that he could fly by way of Holland and avoid the necessity of any French permission.

The eighteen passengers who have signed up for the second flight of the Graf Zeppelin to America had assembled here early today and throughout the evening waited impatiently in the

WAR GAME PLANES DOWNED BY STORM

22, Held Up in Cumberland, Take Off, and, Scattered, Land in 3 States.

CAPITAL AIRMEN ARRIVE

Uniontown, Pa., May 14 (A.P.).—Twenty-two Army airplanes, which were forced to put in at an emergency air field at Cumberland late Sunday because of unfavorable weather encountered while on the way to air maneuvers in Ohio, today made a second unsuccessful attempt to overcome the elements and reach their destination. Tonight the 22 ships, consisting of bombers, pursuit planes and observation craft, were reported down in southwestern Pennsylvania, northern West Virginia and eastern Ohio.

All of the planes were said to have made safe landings, although in some instances they came down on the rain-soaked turf of golf courses. None was expected to get away before tomorrow, according to advices received at Burgess Field, Army airport here.

Thirteen of the planes were at Langin Field, Moundsville, W. Va., one near Morgantown, W. Va., and one near Elkins, in the same State. Four were at an emergency field near Steubenville, Ohio, and two more were reported near Zanesville, Ohio, while one was at Burgess Field, here.

The bomber that landed near Morgantown later was refueled and flew to Burgess Field, Uniontown, where the pilot, Lieut. William Davis, said he would await orders.

Visibility over the Alleghany Mountains west of Cumberland was described as "terrible" by Maj. J. H. Rudolph, flight commander, who landed at Moundsville. There was fog and rain and many of the craft went far off their outlined course.

On Sunday, when the 22 planes were forced to put in at Cumberland, the score of ships ran into a wind and

OIL-BURNING PLANE FLIES FROM DETROIT

Trip to Langley Field Is Made on 8½ Gallons, Costing Only $4.68.

PADLOCKS GUARD MOTOR

Langley Field, Va., May 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Chains and padlocks today guarded the zealously kept secret of the Packard Diesel aircraft engine from the eyes of experts assembled here for the fourth annual engineering research conference, held under auspices of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. Few of the engineers who attended even knew that the "mystery motor" of American aviation was on the field and none was allowed a chance to penetrate the mystery.

It was a stroke of daring on the part of the manufacturers that brought the new engine to the conference at all. Capt. L. M. Woolson, its designer, and Walter Lees, another pilot employed by the Packard Co., came here yesterday in a 6-hour-and-50-minute flight from Detroit in a Stimson monoplane equipped with the Diesel power plant that they expect will revolutionize the economics of flying.

Instead of gasoline at the rate of ten or twelve gallons an hour, they burned ordinary furnace oil, cruising at 95 miles an hour and consuming only eight and a half gallons of fuel every hour. The oil they used cost exactly $4.68, as compared to about $25 they would have paid for high-test gasoline to feed an ordinary motor of the same horsepower.

They hustled their ship into a hangar as soon as it was on the ground and immediately swathed the engine in special tarpaulins which were then wrapped about it with heavy chains and further secured by padlocks. The cabin doors were locked and Army mechanics were asked to exercise special vigilance to keep any one from tampering with the plane or motor.

This afternoon Capt. Woolson was notified from Detroit that news of his

Wales Rescues Workman, Trapped Showing Machine

Prince's Presence of Mind Credited With Saving Life of Foreman, Caught in Whirling Belt; Seizes Him Twice to Pull Him Clear.

Newcastle, England, May 15 (U.P.).—The Prince of Wales, for whom any number of British subjects would lay down their lives, risked his own for a fellow countryman tonight when he saved the life of the foreman in charge of a can-making machine at the northeast coast exhibition here.

Springing to the assistance of the foreman, named Guinness, who had been caught in a machine belt, the heir to the British throne made two desperate efforts before he succeeded in pulling the man clear from the mass of whirling machinery.

The prince's act again demonstrated the presence of mind and quick judgment which have carried him safely through various situations in public life which might otherwise have been embarrassing and through grave hazards in sports.

Guinness was demonstrating the can-making machine to the prince. The foreman was standing on a 7-foot ladder to explain the various parts of the machine when he lost his footing and fell against the rapidly moving machine belt.

His arms were caught in the belt and his body swung free. Guinness' feet were dangling a few inches from a mass of racing machinery when the prince sprang to his assistance.

The prince grabbed the foreman's legs and attempted to pull him out of danger, but lost his grip. He immediately regained his hold on Guinness' legs and this time dragged the man clear of the machine.

The prince's appearance in the role of life saver came after the opening of the exhibition. The prince attended the opening and then went on a tour of the Palace of Industries—where he witnessed the operation of the can-making machine.

Mexico Dry Law Drive Planned by Portes Gil

President Tells of Program to Carry Over Several Years, Which Will Outlaw Liquor in Southern Nation; No Drastic Change Now.

Mexico City, May 14 (A.P.).—A nation-wide temperance campaign to be supported by the national treasury was announced tonight by President Emilio Portes Gil. The campaign, while proceeding with "gradual and prudent measures," contemplates the eventual establishment of drastic prohibition laws.

The president previously had announced his intention to persuade the Mexican people from the use of intoxicating liquors, which he termed their worst ill. Tonight he announced the formation next Monday of a national committee to be headed by the secretary of public health, with representatives of all classes interested in public welfare.

The eventual object of the committee will be prohibition of all alcoholic beverages except beer and wine. Even then public sale would be denied women and children and the premises where liquor is sold would be strictly controlled and their number diminished. A first step would be permitting the sale of hard liquors only in sealed bottles and to be consumed other than where purchased.

The plan includes obligatory anti-alcohol instruction in all public and private schools, organizations of mothers, teachers and school children into leagues against alcohol with administration of the total abstinence pledge, national and local exhibitions to show the harmful effects of drink and agitation for physical education.

The plan also stipulates that all school textbooks must carry a lecture against alcohol on the first pages. All moving picture theaters must show propaganda slides.

As a parallel campaign, playgrounds and adults' recreation centers will be created, financial assistance will be given for the construction of cheap and sanitary homes with low rents, and an attempt will be made to create public savings banks and insurance organizations.

Temperance lectures will be given to the army, in factories and in labor union headquarters and posters will be put up throughout Mexico.

The president said, the committee will take up with the national and state governments the question of "gradual and prudent" promulgation of dry measures. These include limitation of the number of saloons, prohibition

Deathbed Marriage Fails As Poison Is Fatal to Girl

Deadly Potion Taken in Error as Headache Cure by Capital Fiancee, 19.

A death-bed marriage of life long sweethearts was frustrated last night when the waning strength of Miss Evelyn Bates, 19 years old, made it impossible for her to go through with the ceremony, planned three hours before she died at George Washington University Hospital, from the effects of poison taken Thursday.

As attendants and relatives at her bedside saw that the end of the girl's struggle for life was near, her fiance, Bernard R. Murphy, 23 years old, of 1729 Riggs place northwest, asked that a minister be called and that the two be married before death claimed his bride-to-be.

Miss Bates' father, John Frank Bates, of 615 Sixth street northwest, summoned the family's pastor, and arrange-the farm problem in accordance with the President's plan, generally speaking. Of course, in detail, every change made by the Senate in the House bill was in contravention of the President's views, because he had approved and accepted the House bill as his.

The bill sets up a farm board with a revolving fund of $500,000,000 with which to encourage cooperative marketing, finance stabilization corporations, bring about the withdrawal of unproductive lands, and generally go its way unmolested.

The debenture provision authorizes the board to give tariff debentures whenever in its opinion it is necessary to afford relief to a particular commodity. Under the working of this plan the shipper of a bushel of wheat, for example, would receive a 21 cents bonus.

Two Eastern Democrats and Eastern Republicans in general are quite naturally opposed to it, and the latter's ranks are augmented by other Republicans of Eastern, or rather, administration minds. The Eastern Democratic press is a unit against the provision, too, but those who are shaping the Democrats' political course are convinced that they have the best fight they have had in years. They must be getting a sympathetic response from somewhere.

Debenture Admitted Grab.

Of course, the debenture is a grab, they admit, but so is the tariff. The Republicans are grabbing for the industrial interests in the tariff bill, the Democrats contend, and they are grabbing for the farmer in the debenture. If it is to be a big raid upon governmental favors, as they insist the tariff always has been, then instead of wasting their efforts trying to stop this raid they will get in on it.

In the end they consider they will be able to go before the farmer and show him how they tried to grab something for him.

Of course, it is politics, they agree, but the whole farm relief scheme is politics. The Republicans made politics of it in the recent campaign.

Senators Robinson and Harrison, before the vote yesterday, kept throwing up the Republican promise to place "agriculture on a parity with industry." To do this, they contended, agriculture must be given such bounties as are given to industry.

Market Limit Charged.

Robinson again charged that President Hoover's theory is to limit the farm markets to this country while he would encourage industry to sell to the world.

Both Robinson and Harrison charged that the plan of the House leaders to refuse to consider the debenture plan on constitutional grounds was "subterfuge." Robinson declared the United States Supreme Court has repeatedly ruled that the provision that all revenue measures must originate in the House applies to tax levies. It so ruled on the act establishing the postal money order system, he declared.

Harrison declared he could not believe that the "House would take advantage of a technicality to deny the will of the people."

The House leadership plan is understood to be to have the bill challenged today when it comes back from the Senate and send it right back.

The Senate Democrats think their political position is so good that even if the debenture ultimately brings about the defeat of the tariff they and the sections they represent will be no worse off than they are now.

Man Dies in Cabin Fire; 2 Others Badly Burned

Kansas City, May 14 (A.P.).—R. D. Kennedy, Memphis, Tenn., was burned to death and two others suffered dangerous injuries, in a fire in a tourist cabin near here early today. Kennedy's wife is not expected to recover from burns she received. The third occupant of the cabin, R. H. Steele, Jackson, Miss., was given a slight chance for recovery.

Mrs. Kennedy and Steele fought their way out of the cabin and rolled in the grass to extinguish the flames that enveloped their night clothing. Kennedy was dragged from the building unconscious by R. L. White, who occupied a nearby cabin. An explosion awakened her, Mrs. Kennedy said. The cabin was equipped with a coal stove and a gas stove. It was believed that leaking gas caused the explosion.

HEAVY BALLOTNIG IN RAIN

Jersey City, N. J., May 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Mayor Frank Hague will rule Jersey City for four more years at least.

Leading his ticket of five, his inexorable democratic machine returned him victor over the challenging fusionists today with a majority of 25,145 votes.

These 25,145 votes from the narrowest margin by which Hague has won since first he was elected to the city commission 16 years ago. Through a soggy rain exactly 115,000 voters, almost 88 per cent of the total eligible registration flocked to the polls.

Following is Unshaken.

Hague's victory, aside from returning himself, John Beggans, Michael J. Fagen, Arthur Potterton and William B. Quinn to the commission, means that the State Republican organization which hoped through this fusion issue to gain considerable ground in Hudson County is repulsed completely, and it means that Hague's democratic following is unimpaired.

The six weeks' campaign in which John V. Hartung and Joshua Ringle, Republicans, and James P. Meehan, John Morris and James F. Murray, Democrats, composing the fusion ticket, sought to wrest control of Jersey City from Hague was the hottest, bitterest, hardest-fought and most spectacular the city has experienced.

The tension which has gripped the city through these weeks of campaigning broke tonight when the news of Hague's complete victory became known. Snake parades, fireworks, effigies of Jeff Burkitt, Hague's chief attacker and responsible for the great showing of the fusion campaign, originated spontaneously in many sections of the city.

Crowds Celebrate Result.

More than 10,000 persons swamped City Hall, and many thousands more congregated on Journal Square under the windows of the anti-Hague headquarters to celebrate the victory of their Mayor and existing government.

Another mob, somewhat smaller, gathered at the home of Burkitt, on Van Wagenen avenue, prepared to hoot and possibly shell with decadent eggs the vanquished quoter of tax figures on his return home. Police reserves quelled them before Burkitt arrived.

Lateran Treaties Voted by Deputies

Ratification Is Granted, With Only Two Voices in Dissent.

Rome, May 14 (U.P.).—The Chamber of Deputies today ratified the Lateran treaties, which end the 58-year-old Roman dispute between the Pope and the Italian government. There were only two dissentients in the chamber, the vote being 357 to 2.

By the treaties the Pope's sovereignty over Vatican territory is recognized, and thus in a measure he regains some of his temporal power, whose removal in 1870 began the dispute. From that time until today no Pope has left the Vatican area, preferring voluntary imprisonment on Catholic property.

Two supplementary bills regulating marriage laws in harmony with the Lateran accord and completing financial arrangements outlined in the treaties, were passed unanimously.

FILM BATTLE DEATH LAID TO NEGLIGENCE

U. S. Attorney So Charges in Referring Old Ironsides Case to State.

PROSECUTION IS HINTED

Los Angeles, May 14 (A.P.).—Ground was laid here today for possible criminal prosecution of motion picture officials who figured in the filming of the historical picture "Old Ironsides," in which one actor lost his life and three others were seriously injured.

Such action was foreseen when United States District Attorney Samuel McNabb turned over to the Los Angeles County district attorney evidence gathered by the Government in connection with the making of the picture.

In submitting the finding McNabb said he believed there had been criminal negligence in the production, which was supervised by James Cruze, widely known Hollywood motion picture executive. The United States attorney held that inasmuch as the filming took place within 3 miles of the coast the question of prosecution lay with State and not Federal authorities.

The picture was photographed in June, 1926. The accident which resulted in an investigation by the Government occurred on June 26. The picture, filmed in a bay at Santa Catalina Island by the Famous-Players-Lasky Co., was an interpretation of the history of the famous ship Constitution and its battles against Barbary pirates.

In taking the picture, Charles G. Davis, an "extra," was killed and Ernest Olsen, E. R. Johnson and Harry Broyles were injured. Suits for damages were brought against the company by Mrs. Davis, the widow, and by the injured men. Mrs. Davis got nothing. Olsen and Johnson received $2,250 and Broyles obtained a judgment for $28,541. The briefs in the civil suits charged Cruze with being "negligent" and with "deliberate, wanton and reckless disregard of the lives and safety of the men employed."

During the picturization shells from a movie fort were made to appear to cut down the mainmast of the "Constitution." Men had been sent to the mizzenmast yardarm to furl sails. An expert lumberman, who was supposed to be able to cut timber so it would fall in any desired direction, notched the mainmast for the fall. A charge of dynamite was placed to complete the actual shattering. The mast fell in the wrong direction, knocking the actors into the ocean.

The ship used was the Llewellyn J. Morse, a "double" of the real Constitution.

The Famous-Players-Lasky Co. filed a petition in Federal court asking exemption from liability. This was denied.

Thief Steals Railroad, Houses and Grain Crop

Shamokin, Pa., May 14 (U.P.).—Things have been going from bad to worse in the local crime wave.

First, half a mile of the railroad disappeared.

Then the owner of a disused coal mine visited it to see what kind of shape the washery building was in and the washery was gone.

Hard on the heels of this mystery another large building vanished, fortunately with no persons inside at the time.

But the last straw came when C. C. Fox, of Mount Carmel, went out to his barn to look over his wheat preparatory to hauling it to market. He found nothing but several half-starved mice. The entire crop of several hundred bushels was gone.

The local detectives had already accused Francis Bastress of stealing the half mile of railroad track, the washery and the building.

When they received Fox's complaint today they sighed, hunted up Bastress, and arrested him for stealing the wheat, too. He faces trial on all four accusations.

Former Arkansas Speaker Indicted

Reece Caudle Faces Charge of Attempt to Bribe Legislators.

Little Rock, Ark., May 14 (A.P.).—Reece Caudle, of Russellville, member of the Arkansas Railroad Commission and speaker of the State House of Representatives in 1927, was indicted by the Pulaski County grand jury here today on a charge of attempting to bribe a member of the Legislature in connection with the horse race betting bill at the recent session.

The grand jury has been engaged in an investigation of bribery charges since the Legislature adjourned on March 14. State Senator John M. Quarles, of Helena, in charging on the floor of the Senate that bribes had been offered for votes for the bill to legalize pari-mutuel betting on horse races, declared he had been told "to see Reece Caudle."

The horse racing bill, after passing the House earlier in the session, was passed by the Senate on the eve of adjournment at a turbulent session, but Gov. Harvey Parnell vetoed the measure.

INJUNCTION BLOCKS LOCKOUT OF 75,000

New York Building Trade Local Gets Order After Electricians Yield.

THREAT TO OUST UNIONS

New York, May 14 (A.P.).—Developments today assured 75,000 building trades workers that a lockout would not be put in force against them at least until Friday.

The Building Trades Employers Association voted yesterday to institute a union labor lockout at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in retaliation for failure of the Building Trades Council to stop sympathetic strikes in support of an Electrical Workers Union that had refused to furnishe workers to three contractors.

Then this morning the cause for the lockout was removed by the electrical workers union reverasing themselves and announcing that they would furnish men to the "blacklisted" contractors in the interests of harmony.

Shortly after that a local union of the cement and concrete workers union obtained a temporary injunction against a lockout with an order for the employers association to show cause in supreme court Friday why the injunction should not be made permenent.

Before the electrical union announced its change of front officials of the employers association said that after the lockout went into effect it was planned to begin filling the vacant jobs on the $150,000,000 worth of construction that would be affected with nonunion labor and that ultimately nonunion labor would be installed in all building trades in the city.

GOV. LONG ATTACKS LEGALITY OF TRIAL

Defense Demurrers to Steps in Impeachment Case Occupy Opening Day.

VOTE HALTED BY RECESS

Baton Rouge, La., May 14 (A.P.).—Presenting himself at the bar of the State Senate tody to answer impeachment charges, Gov. Huey P. Long threw the case into a maze of constitutional argument by attacking the legality of the procedure.

Two demurrers filed by his attorneys gave the constitutional lawyers a field day, counsel on each side citing the State constitution and impeachment precedents in other States to prove diametrically opposite contentions. The Senate recessed at 6:30 o'clock until tomorrow without a vote.

The demurrers charged that the House of Representatives voted impeachment while it was illegally in session and that the present Senate was acting in violation of the State constitution in sitting now as a court of impeachment.

Recess Blocks Vote.

They further alleged that even if the Senate and House did have legal authority to meet as a trial court and inquisitorial body, only one of the eight counts against the governor could come to trial as the other seven were voted after the expiration of the time limit of the governor's call for an extraordinary session of the legislature.

John Overton, of Alexandria, leading counsel for the governor, made an appeal to halt the whole procedure as being contrary to constitutional provisions. George K. Perrault and J. Y. Sanders, jr., of the House prosecuting managers, spoke in justification of the impeachment proceedings.

Shortly after 6 o'clock counsel for both sides concluded and Chief Justice Charles A. O'Neill, presiding, made ready to call for a vote, but it was blocked by a motion from Senator Delos R. Johnson to recess until tomorrow at 10 a. m. Johnson declared that each member of the Senate was entitled to fifteen minutes' discussion of the demurrers. The motion was upheld by a vote of 22 to 17.

Governor Seems Indifferent.

During the day's arguments the youthful governor sat with the defense counsel, dressed in a white linen suit. He occasionally consulted with his associates, but assumed an attitude bordering on indifference. Mrs. Long sat in the rear of the room on temporary stands built for a limited number of spectators. Two brothers of the governor also were present.

The Senate session lacked the fire and tumult of the House when it voted eight counts against the governor, including charges of misuse of public funds, intimidation of the press and general incompetency. Tomorrow the Senate is expected to complete consideration of demurrer No. 1, and this vote will be regarded as an index of strength. It was indicated that if he lost in the Senate the governor would take his case to the State and Federal courts.

LLOYD GEORGE SETS PACE FOR HIS FOES

British Liberal Chief, Though Unlikely to Win, Still Held Dangerous.

HAS KEPT PARTY ALIVE

By RAYMOND GRAM SWING.

London, May 14.—The Liberal party must be summed up in the name of a single man, Lloyd George.

What life it has in this election he gave it. What leadership it may exert in directing British politics in the near future will be his leadership.

He is the most powerful individual in Great Britain today.

To say this is to point out both the strength and weakness of the Liberal party. For the moment it is a one-man party and that is a melancholy fate for the party, which ruled Britain for a generation and gave it some of its great political principles and men.

But the party was a corpse, and he has revived it. And there is no way of hiding the fact that it lives for the present only by his magic.

It is the pledge which worked the miracle. The pledge is to reduce unemployment to normal proportions in a year's time without costing the taxpayers a penny.

Specifically it means that enough money will be borrowed to create work for about 570,000 men, and the interest and capital of the loan are to be paid out of savings in unemployment insurance. The new work is to be chiefly road and bridge building, telephone extension, land drainage, electrical development and new housing schemes.

He Grasps Opportunity.

People had talked about unemployment and schemes of relief until the topic had lost its tang. To paraphrase Mark Twain, every one complained about unemployment, nobody offered to do anything about it.

The discontent grew to a high pitch this winter, but no remedy was being put forward. Lloyd George gauged the dissatisfaction to a nicety. Here was the theme, now to say something different from the usual academic pallaver, something with a ring and a challenge in it.

He consulted the Liberal economists, who, like so many others, had studied the problem to its roots. He asked them for facts and figures, not mere theories. Precisely how many men could be absorbed? How much would it cost? How could the work be financed? These were straight questions and he asked straight answers. He got them and out of them created the pledge.

Not Trusted in Britain.

The force of the pledge lies in the fact that neither Conservatives nor Socialists were thinking of curing unemployment in a year. The Tory policy was to let it cure itself as trade improved. The Labor policy had been similar to the pledge, but much less crisp, and it had been pushed aside by Labor speakers, who preferred talking about unemployment as a disease of capitalism, a thing which could not be cured while capitalism survived. Lloyd George said twelve months!

Lloyd George is not trusted in Great Britain. Perhaps no man in public life has more enemies. But he is disliked for other traits than sagacity and clear thinking. When he said "twelve months" it startled everybody. People began suddenly to think of unemployment in a new way, not as a permanent drain on British vitality, not as lasting heritage of the war, not as a disease of capitalism, but as something which could be done away with if the men in Whitehall only had initiative and enterprise.

It ceased to be a punishment from the fates. It became somebody's fault, something that could be remedied.

The pledge, once thrown into the arena, gave rise to the strangest after effects. Conservatives and Laborites, instead of fighting each other, both turned to fight the pledge. They heaped derision on it. They ridiculed it. They riddled it. And in the next breath they either claimed that it was what they had been already doing or that it was their own policy and that L. G. had stolen it from their lockers.

In a way he had. He was merely promising to put into operation the schemes worked out by countless government committees and political experts. The same policy had been outlined by Labor economists and by Tory committees. He had borrowed it. But if he had borrowed it why had his opponents not promised it themselves?

Not only did the pledge become the talk of London, but word came from every corner saying it had stimulated and fired the country. Talk was heard of a genuine Liberal revival. Liberals were going to carry seats they had not won since 1906, even seats they had not won in two generations.

Plan Disturbs Conservatives.

This was highly disturbing news for Stanley Baldwin, for the Tories are in office by the grace of Liberal votes, and could never have a majority without Liberal help.

Lloyd George, not Socialism, became the chief menace to Conservative prospects, and when Mr. Baldwin rose in the Drury Lane Theater to give the keynote speech of the campaign, his opening words were: "Mr. Lloyd George admits he is a man of promise. In that respect I shall not compete with him." He devoted the main fighting portion of his speech, not to the Red peril, but to the Wizard of Wales.

Ramsay MacDonald, for his part, when it came to making the keynote speech of the Labor campaign in Royal Albert Hall, began on this same theme of Lloyd George and the pledge, and devoted even more time to prove the Liberal policy was borrowed in its entirety from the Labor files.

The election is like a great race between two famous runners, with a third participant to whom neither racer has given any thought. The third man not only shows up for the race in the pink of condition, but jumps into the lead at the crack of the pistol. The other runners challenge that lead in repeated spurts, but the third man holds to it with surprising ease.

Lloyd George Can't Win.

That is the picture, but the race is long, and Lloyd George is not going to win it. He is only setting the pace. He knows that himself. But the point is he probably can go on setting the pace. He probably can decide who will govern and on what terms. He also can decide how long. And when the election is over his handful of Liberal members may be quite a valuable little army.

It is not so illogical as it may appear that Conservatives and Socialists are fighting the smaller party and not each other. Britain has a two-party tradition and would like to revert to the two-party system.

Both Conservatives and Socialists have chosen the Liberals for the sacrifice. Once the Liberals are out of the way, the Tories hope to absorb most of the Liberal voters, while the Socialists are as sure as many of them are radicals and will join the Labor party. But the Liberals after having tried obligingly to commit suicide, once in the coalition days and later in the Asquith-Lloyd George split, now insist most provokingly on staying alive. And the more it is attacked, the more the Liberal party grows, or seems to grow.

If it comes back to the House of Commons with more than 70 seats it probably will hold the balance of power. If, despite appearances, it should win only a considerably smaller number, say 40, as in 1924, the party can be called doomed and the galvanizing by Lloyd George has been in vain.

DES MOINES U. RIOT PLOT, SAYS SHIELDS

Appearing Suddenly at Baptist Session, He Promises to "Give Names."

MISS REBMAN OFF EAST

Buffalo, N. Y., May 14 (A.P.).—Dr. T. T. Shields, president of the board of trustees of Des Moines University, appeared unexpectedly at the opening session here tonight of the seventh annual meeting of the Baptist Bible Union, of North America and, taking the platform, launched into a review of the situation that resulted in the closing of the Fundamentalists' University, at Des Moines.

It had been announced at the opening of tonight's meeting that Dr. Shields would not be present, but would speak tomorrow. Dr. Shields was invited to the platform and was received with cheers.

"I am sorry it happened; I think it will wake up America," Dr. Shields said.

Promises to Give Names.

He asserted he would say little about the affair tonight, but he would "demand time to deal with facts later during the convention and give names and addresses of persons who had caused the trouble."

Minor Stevens, another trustee who, Dr. Shields declared tonight in his speech "was largely responsible for the trouble," arrived after the meeting with Dean Earl Calloway, of the school. Dr. Shields declared he would debate before the convention the cause of the disturbance.

Regarding the informal meeting of the board of trustees here, Dr. Shields said he had no idea when it would be called, but it would be held some time during the week.

As to difference of opinion between Canadians and Americans on the trustees' board, Dr. Shields declared such reports were groundless and decried any attempt to make an international issue of the matter.

"The time is coming when all nations will forget national relationships in recognition of a common Lord," he declared. "Whoever raised the cry of trouble between British and Americans is no friend of mine," he added. "We are all one."

Police Again Accused.

In speaking of Trustee Stevens, he said Stevens was taken on the board largely because he lived near Des Moines, and declared, "I advised Mr. Stevens he had better resign, as all members must work to keep the university going."

He branded as a falsehood the report he had demanded the resignation of seven members of the school faculty "as modernists." He said the president of the board had no authority to dismiss any one.

Touching on the scenes during the egg throwing in the riot, he told the audience he was convinced the instigators of the riot "intended murder," and he repeated former charges that Des Moines policemen failed to arrive on time to quell the row.

Miss Rebman Resentful.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 14 (N.Y.W. N.S.).—Edith M. Rebman, secretary of the board of trustees and a storm center of the Des Moines University upheaval, tonight granted her first interview since the board meeting that Saturday resulted in a resolution clearing her and Dr. T. T. Shields of undue friendship.

As she packed her bag in a local hotel, preparatory to taking a 10 o'clock train Eastward to the convention of the Baptist Bible Union of North America in Buffalo, she expressed resentment at the attitude of students at the university who had rioted and broken up the final meeting of the board and declared she thought they should be punished for rebellion. She expressed a profound distaste for the photograph which was reproduced on the front page of an afternoon paper.

"When are you going to get a better picture of me?" she asked. Told that the picture, taken just before the riot Saturday night was the best available, she immediately handed her interviewer a cabinet photograph which she said was her favorite.

Only 34 Years, She Says.

Newspaper estimates of her age as 40, and that of Dr. Shields as 60, were criticized by Miss Rebman.

"Dr. Shields is 54 years old," she said. "How much his junior do you think I am?"

"Twenty years?"

"Exactly right. I'm 34 years old."

She wrote on the back of her favorite photograph: "Return to Edith M. Rebman, Des Moines University."

"You're coming back, Miss Rebman, after the convention?" she was asked.

"I certainly am. I'm coming to show 'em I'm not afraid."

RUM CHASE VICTIM

DANO N. JACKLEY.

POLICE TAKE SUSPECT IN FATAL RUM CHASE

have more details of the accident before acting, while Montgomery County police may seek to hold Martin in connection with a hit-and-run accident last Sunday. J. J. Quinn, head of the Washington Prohibition Bureau, could not be reached to learn whether or not prohibition officials would push for action in Martin's case.

Early reports of the fatal crash, as made by the prohibition agents, were that during the chase from Laurel to Berwyn they tried three times to pass the auto ahead, only to have it swerve and prevent such action. On the third attempt hub caps clicked and the big machine of the prohibition agents skidded and hit a telephone pole. Later it was learned that in a report to Maj. Pratt, superintendent of District police, the agents reported "bumping" the car ahead three times, the fatal skid following the third effort to force the fleeing auto to stop.

Jackley, who had been in the prohibition service for eight years, and who lived at 514½ Second street southeast, died on the way to Providence Hospital. Unusually severe internal injuries were given as the cause of his death, as doctors found no marks on his body.

Car's Numbers Checked.

The pursuing dry agents were so close to the rumrunning car that the District of Columbia license numbers on it were plain, this resulting in Martin's arrest.

Jackley was accompanied by Acting Deputy Administrator William R. Blandford, Lamar York and Charles McCartney, all the agents working out of the Washington office. York hailed a passing machine to bring Jackley to Washington but the injured man died in York's arms before the hospital was reached.

The prohibition agents, acting on a tip that a load of alcohol was to be run through, were cruising along the Baltimore pike about 4 o'clock yesterday morning after two hours of fruitless search. Suddenly a light roadster flashed by at Laurel and the dry men gave chase.

Hubs Touch at 70 Mile Race.

For 15 miles the chase continued with McCartney at the wheel of the pursuing car. The needle on the speedometer of the prohibition men's car reached 60 several times during the pursuit and on two previous occasions as the officers tried to catch the fleeing auto, the driver of the latter car swerved to prevent this. Each time the pursuing auto skidded but straightened out and kept on. On the third attempt, at 70 miles per hour, the big car of the agents skidded, whirled around and hit the pole, while the suspected rum runner, disappeared into the early morning haze.

Jackley groaned and pressed his hands to his sides. Inquiries by fellow agents as to his injuries brought the response that "I am hurt inside. You'd better take me to a hospital."

One of the agents who accompanied Jackley on his death ride blamed the accident and the failure to capture the fleeing auto on the new order which prohibits use of guns during such a chase. The agents were close enough on a number of occasions to have shot the tires off the front machine, he said.

Leaves Daughter, Widow.

Jackley is survived by his widow and a 14-year-old daughter Ruth. During his eight years of service in the Prohibition Department he served in Maryland, West Virginia, New York, New Jersey and Florida.

J. J. Quinn, head of the Washington bureau, said Jackley was one of the most efficient men on the staff in the Capital.

Jackley's body is at the Zurhorst undertaking parlors, where it will remain until tonight, when it will be shipped to Cameron, W. Va., where funeral services will be conducted tomorrow.

Montreat Greets 500 Presbyterians

General Assembly to Name New Moderator to Succeed Dr. Harris Kirk.

Montreat, N. C., May 14 (A.P.).—Final preparations were being made today for the annual meeting of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church, in the United States, which convenes here Thursday for a session which is expected to last approximately a week.

The assembly, which is the highest court in the church, a representative law-making body somewhat similar to the Congress of the United States, is composed of about 350 commissioners from the various presbyteries. One-half of the commissioners are ministers and one-half are ruling elders. About 500 persons are expected to attend. Nearly every room in the new assembly inn has already been taken.

The assembly will convene at 11 o'clock Thursday morning in the Montreat Auditorium for the sermon of the retiring moderator, Dr. Harris Kirk, of Baltimore. In the afternoon the first business to come before the session will be the choice of a new moderator.

Moroccans Killed By French Troops

Fourteen Rebels Are Among Those Slain in Attack on Government Outpost.

Casa Blanca, Morocco, May 14 (A.P.). Fourteen rebels, three members of the French Foreign Legion and several native auxiliaries were killed in an attack of 300 dissidents against the new French outpost of El Bordj in the early hours of May 11, it was announced here today.

The rebels advanced in several groups, the first of which carried a white flag as though coming in to surrender. They opened fire at a range of 1,200 yards.

After a hot exchange of shots the dissidents were rapidly dispersed by the French battalion of the foreign legion, in garrison, aided by an airplane.

Nine of the defenders of the post were wounded. The district is now calm

The post at El Bordj was occupied by the French after their advance April 29 into the upper Ziz country. It was one of the farthest outposts in the Atlas region, which is a lair for bandit tribes

Boy, 16, Trudges 750 Miles To Face Homicide Charge

English Orphan Lad Returns to New York From Marion, S. C., to Answer Accusation Resulting From Accidental Shooting of Friend.

New York, May 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A 16-year-old boy, dirty, dishevelled, hatless, coatless and hungry, trudged into the West Thirtieth Street Police Station this forenoon and surrendered himself to face a homicide charge, after having "hitch-hiked" from Marion, S. C.

He was Louis Wesley Barnes, an orphan whose father gave his life for England in the World War in 1914 and whose mother died while he was an inmate of the State Farm in Massachusetts. On January 31, last, Louis, a bellboy at the Hotel Pennsylvania, took Michael Broderich, 18 years old, another bellboy, to the basement of the hotel to show him a prized possession, a .22-caliber pistol.

As Louis was showing Michael how the weapon worked a shell fell to the concrete floor and exploded. The bullet struck Michael in the right eye. He was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, and Louis was arrested charged with felonious assault.

Louis was held in $1,500 bail in Jefferson Market Court. Bail was obtained, and the case was adjourned several times, as Michael remained in the hospital. Finally Louis drifted away to look for work. He was working on the highways in Marion when he heard that Michael had died on May 9 and decided to come back and face the charge.

At 10:30 o'clock this morning Louis walked into the police station and asked for Detectives Sheehan and Leef, the men who had charge of the case. He told his story and explained he had not eaten for two days. He had walked a good part of the distance, too. The detectives took him out and bought food for him and then took him before Magistrate Dreyer in Jefferson Market Court. His bail meanwhile had been forfeited.

Magistrate Dreyer questioned the boy, who said he was born in Manchester, England, January 3, 1913. In 1916, he said, his mother brought him to America. She soon remarried, he said, and his stepfather placed him in the State Farm. When he got out he learned his mother was dead and came to New York to make his living.

The magistrate said he was obliged to refer the whole matter to the homicide court. He asked if any attorney in court would volunteer to represent the boy. James Mayer responded. Several strike cases he represented were then adjourned and Mayer went with the detectives and the boy to homicide court.

After a preliminary hearing Barnes was held without bail by Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan for examination May 21.

REPARATION MERGER WITH DEBTS FEARED

Senate Opposes International Bank Plan; May Demand All Correspondence.

EXPERTS' PARLEY ENDING

By ALBERT W. FOX.

Will the war debts due to the United States from Europe be merged in the German reparation payments as a result of the negotiations now being brought to a close by the committee of experts at Paris?

This is the question which now looms as a consequence of latest reports reaching here through official and unofficial channels, and the Senate probably will lose no time in asking the State Department for all correspondence between officials here and Owen D. Young, American expert, acting under orders of the reparations commission but understood to be in close touch by cable with the Government of the United States.

A full report will be desired by the Senate if the experts announce agreement upon a plan which directly or indirectly involves the United States.

Obtained Kellogg Data.

The Senate by resolution under date of April 5, 1926, obtained copies of all correspondence, notes, exchanges and communications connected with the negotiations which Frank B. Kellogg, then Ambassador to Great Britain, conducted with the European governments in connection with the Dawes plan and the apportionment of America's share of reparations under it. Even the instructions given Ambassador Kellogg by the State Department were called for by the Senate and produced by Coolidge in response to the resolution.

It is therefore anticipated that this precendent of keeping the American people advised with respect to these international transactions will be followed by the Hoover administration. The correspondence which the Government has been conducting with Mr. Young or any correspondence with J. P. Morgan or Mr. Lamont will be all part of the record in case a substitute plan is to be agreed upon in place of the specific provisions of the Dawes plan covering reparations payments due to the people of the United States.

Would Replace Article 3.

Any substitute plan, whether characterized as a private arrangement between international bankers, or otherwise, will be designed to replace Article 3 of Chapter 1, dealing with "Allocation of the Dawes Annuities."

This article stipulates that America's share for army costs shall be "55,000,000 gold marks per annum, beginning September 1, 1926, and continuing until the principal sums outstanding on account of the costs of the United States Army of Occupation, as already reported to the Reparations Commission, shall be extinguished." It also provides that American taxpayers are to receive "2½ per cent of all receipts from Germany on account of the Dawes annuities available for distribution as reparations, provided that the annuity resulting from this percentage shall not in any year exceed the sum of 45,000,000 gold marks."

Coolidge Nipped Criticism.

By giving the Senate all the correspondence, instruction, incident to reaching this agreement, Mr. Coolidge nipped in the bud criticism which would otherwise have seriously interfered with the carrying out of America's part of the program. The Senate feared the consequences of secret or confidential negotiations in a matter affecting money owed to the American people by governments which were known to be striving by every artifice to obtain advantages at the expense of the United States.

The correspondence, when transmitted by Mr. Coolidge to the Senate, showed that the European powers had tried every form of finesse and maneuver to prevent American taxpayers from obtaining the share which they actually were allotted, but that the representatives of these taxpayers, including Mr. Kellogg, opposed each European move so vigorously and uncompromisingly that the intrigues came to naught.

The correspondence made a profound impression on the Senate and resulted in senatorial support for the features of the Dawes plan affecting American interests, though the Senate did not ratify the agreement.

Concern Over Bank Plan.

There is some concern here over the intimation that the plan to be substituted for the American feature of the Dawes plan is to be a private arrangement between international bankers and therefore not subject to senatorial scrutiny in any of its phases.

This anxiety is somewhat enhanced by reports that the international bank to be set up as part of the new plan is to have jurisdiction not only of reparations payments from Germany, but international debts as well. It is assumed that no such plan can take the American debts collectable from Europe out of the hands of the United States Government or can withdraw America's proper control over reparation payments due from Germany; but it is realized that many hidden pitfalls lurk in international finance of the brand now under discussion in Paris. The possible effort to merge American debts due from Europe and German reparations is anticipated as a matter of course.

Since the Versailles treaty, the European powers have made persistent and repeated efforts to bring about such a merger. The United States Government has defeated each successive effort and maintained at every turn that American credits and German reparation payments were to be kept separate and distinct.

If any feature of the new plan involves an abandonment of this American contention or indirectly has the effect of bringing about such an abandonment, immediate effort will be made here to ascertain all the facts, obtain, if possible, all the correspondence in any way connecting the United States Government with the matter, and then appraise the situation in the light of new developments.

Mayor, City Clerk Tilt Over Pilfered Records

North Little Rock, Ark., May 14 (A. P.—Records of the improvement district of North Little Rock were stolen last night from the city clerk's office. The theft halted an audit of the conduct of the district business, which involved several hundred thousand dollars.

Mayor Ross Lawhon obtained a warrant authorizing a search of the home of City Clerk C. M. Van Dyke, and Van Dyke retaliated with a warrant to search the mayor's home in connection with the theft.

WAR DEBTS REPORT IS EXPECTED TODAY

Only Three Experts Know New Conditions to Be Submitted at Paris Parley.

FINAL SUCCESS IN DOUBT

Paris, May 14 (A.P.).—The crisis in the work of the reparations conference, which had been expected for today, will come tomorrow or Thursday in the opinion of most of the experts tonight.

Sir Josiah Stamp, chief British delegate, and Mr. Hjalmar Schacht, chief German delegate, were unable to finish their work of incorporating in the draft report the conditions under which the Germans are willing to accept the annuities proposed by Owen D. Young, in time to present a text to the conference this afternoon.

Only three persons know exactly what the German conditions, as inserted in the report, are. It was declared emphatically at headquarters of the second Dawes committee this evening that only Sir Josiah Stamp, Dr. Schacht and Mr. Young were cognizant of the matter.

The other experts will learn of the conditions when the complete text of the draft report is distributed tomorrow.

Since it will be necessary to allow at least one day for the creditor experts unfamiliar with the text to study the German conditions, consideration of text in plenary session probably will be no earlier than Thursday.

Meanwhile private conversations continue on other subjects that require final touches. It is thought that the conference can be terminated very promptly, as far as essentials are concerned, as soon as the French and Belgians have given their decision on the German conditions.

The tone of the French and Belgian press is such as to develop doubt that compromise figures will be accepted under any conditions.

Chances for final success of the conference were regarded in expert circles tonight as about even.

5 BODIES RECOVERED AFTER TEXAS FLOOD

Devastated Area Still Is Under Water; Families in Treetops.

RUSH FOOD AND MEDICINE

Livingston, Tex., May 14 (U.P.).—Five bodies had been recovered late today from the flooded Polk County area where torrential rains sent the Trinity River and tributary streams out of their banks Monday night.

The victims, all colored, were found along the edge of the swirling Trinity River by Sheriff R. R. Holliday and W. H. Battle, a fireman of Goodrich, Tex. Three were identified as a mother and two daughters, named Doyle. Searching parties continued efforts to reach families reported marooned in trees and housetops. Three other colored families and two white families still are missing.

Gordon Still, newspaper man, returned this afternoon from a tour of the devastated area and told of hearing negroes calling from treetops while rescuers tried in vain to reach them. Still said there was a need for shallow-draft motor boats, as the current was too swift for rowing skiffs. Boats are being rushed from Houston, as well as food and medicine.

Showers began falling again late today with occasional heavy rain, hampering rescue work and adding a new menace to the situation which has already caused every able-bodied man to join the volunteer rescue crews. The Trinity River was about 10 feet below the Old Spanish Trail Bridge, in the southern part of Polk County. Additional rain, it is feared, will cause it to surge over its banks there.

Livingston tonight was preparing to fight against insanitation and possible shortage of food and water. It is almost entirely cut off from outside communication.

Three Texans Killed By High-Voltage Wire

White Wright, Tex., May 14 (A.P.). Two brothers and a companion were killed early today when they walked into a high voltage wire which had blown down near here. The dead are Dock Webster, 20 years old; Tommie Webster, 23, and Bowen Daniels, 21.

Running out of gasoline while motoring, the men started across a field in search of fuel and come in contact with the wire. Mrs. Dock Webster, who had been left behind in the automobile, found the bodies.

HOOVER RAISES FOUR DUTIES DURING ROW

WESTERNERS PUSH PLEAS

(Associated Press.)

While a number of Republicans and Democrats were finding fault with the pending tariff bill in the House yesterday, President Hoover took advantage of the flexible provisions of the existing law to proclaim increases in duties on flaxseed, milk, cream and window glass.

On recommendation of the Tariff Commission the Executive raised the tariff on flaxseed from 40 to 56 cents a bushel, the same rate proposed in the Hawley bill. Some Western Republicans, however, are not satisfied with the 56-cent rate.

The milk duty was increased from 2½ to 3¾ cents a gallon. The bill provides a duty of 5 cents.

The rate on cream was raised from 20 to 30 cents a gallon. The bill proposes an increase to 48 cents.

Window Glass Rates Raised.

The duties on window glass were boosted by varying degrees from the present rate range of 1¼ to 2½ cents a pound. The bill provides similar increases.

Asked what effect the presidential increases would have on the rates in the bill, Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the House Republican leader, said the President, acting on cases which have been pending some time before the Tariff Commission, merely was giving relief now without waiting for the pending bill to be enacted into law.

In announcing his intention to make the proclamations, President Hoover said he had consulted with congressional leaders as to the desirability of those steps. He said they agreed "that the farmers and others should have the benefit of the Tariff Commission's determinations at once."

Some to Be Reconsidered.

"Some of the reports of the commission," he added, "on which there is either no majority of the commission, or where new facts appear to have developed, have been sent back to the commission for reconsideration."

Meanwhile, representatives from Western States who are dissatisfied with the bill appeared before the Republicans of the ways and means committee, which drafted it, to press amendments to the bill designed to increase further the proposed duties on agricultural products. Other groups met to plan additional appearances before the committeemen. These conferences will continue for several days, and proposals finding favor will be proposed on the floor as committee amendments.

Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, a Republican member of the committee, informed the House that he disagreed with his colleagues on the proposed duties on cedar, maple and birch lumber, now on the free list; on the proposed Cuban sugar duty of 2.40 cents a pound, on retention on the free list of hides, leather and shoes and on the decision to make no changes in the tobacco duties.

Approves of Bulk of Bill.

"The differences with my colleagues," he explained, "consist of a few major features. The great bulk of the bill, however, meets with my hearty approval."

Among the proposals presented to the ways and means committee Republicans was one by Representative Burtness (Republican), North Dakota, seeking a raise to 70 cents a bushel in the flaxseed rate, as against the 56 cents rate proclaimed yesterday by the President.

He argued that Argentina could lay down flaxseed at New York 85 cents cheaper than his State's growers, and that while 86 cents was the original rate requested at the tariff hearings last winter, the 70-cent duty was proposed as a compromise.

Other Proposals.

Representative Swing (Republican), California, proposed a duty of 7 cents a pound on long staple cotton to meet Egyptian competition. The pending bill leaves this commodity on the free list.

An amendment to raise the 2½ cents a pound tariff on casein, left unchanged in the bill, to 8 cents was presented by Representative Selvig (Republican), Minnesota, while Representative Barbour (Republican), California, proposed a raise to 8 cents a pound in the present rate on figs which is not increased in the bill.

Representative Hickey (Republican), Indiana, offered a proposal to permit wool used in the manufacture of knit and felt boots to come in free, the same privilege now accorded wool going into carpets and rugs.

The hearings yesterday took care of only five members of the group representing ten Western States who are seeking increases over the bill rates. Others will appear today along with some Eastern representatives if time permits.

Citizenship Given Wife Of Admiral McCully

Charleston, S. C., May 14 (A.P.).—Among 19 persons given citizenship papers today in the United States Court, Eastern district of South Carolina, was Mrs. Newton A. McCully, wife of Rear Admiral McCully, United States Navy, commandant of the Sixth Naval District and of the Charleston Navy Yard.

Mrs. McCully was a Russian.

who refused to talk were held. Capt. Davis said the quizz lasted four hours.

Capt. Davis said the establishment was equipped for almost any kind of gaming. He said there was a table for an improvised roulette game, tables for dice, poker, checkers, dominoes and other games. The place also was equipped with two booths, built like a mutuel booth at a race track. A number of racing slips and the presence of two private telephones indicated the booths were used for taking bets on horse races.

Police said that windows to the place were barred and boarded up and that the doors were heavy oak, with iron bars running through them. They estimated that it would have required several hours' work to force entrance.

Radio loud speakers were located in all the rooms, and exhaust fans carried off tobacco smoke and stale air, police said.

ACTION CALLED ABSURD

Spectators and jurors alike experienced a mild sensation in Circuit Court of Arlington County yesterday when Judge Howard W. Smith announced to the special grand jury which had been assembled that he had received a letter offering him $500 to decide a suit in favor of Harry N. Doughitt, 2021 Thirty-seventh street northwest, who is being sued by Morris A. Bealle for $500.

The letter, which the judge asserted bore Doughitt's name at the place of signature, resulted in the issuance of a warrant for Bealle's arrest on the complaint of Doughitt, who alleges that Bealle unlawfully, feloniously and falsely forged the letter to which Doughitt's name was reported signed. Doughitt denies that he wrote the letter.

After studying the evidence in the case of the letter to Judge Smith, the special grand jury reported that it was not justified in returning an indictment. This announcement was followed by Doughitt's action in getting out a warrant.

Bealle last night declared that the whole affair was a surprise to him and that he had not heard of either the letter or the warrant until informed of them by a representative of The Post.

"It would be ridiculous for me to do anything like that," Bealle said, "to forge his name. A forgery is so easily detected. Mr. Doughitt will have a chance to prove his charge tomorrow when I appear in Circuit Court to press my suit." He declared that the letter is merely a "smoke screen" to becloud the suit and that he will demand a hearing today.

"MAIL ORDER" BRIDE HELD ON POISONING

Woman Killed Husband She Got Through Agency, State Charges.

SHE SAYS HE KILLED SELF

Columbia, Calif., May 14 (A.P.).—Mrs. Eva Brandon Rablen, "mail-order bride" from Texas, was bound over for trial here today on a charge of poisoning her husband, Carroll Rablen, World War veteran and farmer, at a dance several weeks ago.

Arraignment was set for next Friday in Honora.

The hearing was conducted in a dance pavilion in order to accommodate the large crowd of spectators. The benches were lined with mountain folk who had come from a score of neighboring hamlets to this faded boom town of the Sierras to witness the township's first murder hearing in eighteen years.

The proceedings were short. Three prosecution witnesses told of circumstances surrounding Rablen's death, one of them, Walter Routen, Tuolumne drug store clerk, identifying Mrs. Rablen as the woman who bought a bottle of poison from him a few hours before Rablen died and signed for it as "Mrs. Joe Williams." The defense called no witnesses.

Mrs. Rablen, who became acquainted with her husband through a matrimonial agency and came here a year and a half ago from Quanah, Tex., for the wedding, is alleged by the State to have placed the poison in a cup of coffee which Rablen drank at a dance at Tuttletow, near here, April 26. Rablen died shortly after emptying the cup.

It is Mrs. Rablen's contention that her husband committed suicide.

Mrs. Jose Terzich, county coroner, testified that an Oakland laboratory had reported finding a large quantity of poison in Rablen's stomach.

COMMUNISM IN ENGLAND.

The voters of England have a poor assortment of parties from which to choose a government, but from present indications it appears that they will choose the poorest on May 30. With 5,000,000 women voters added to the electorate, most of them belonging to the communist-infested labor elements, it seems probable that Ramsay MacDonald will become the next prime minister. The Conservatives and Liberals, by fighting among themselves, are virtually assuring the triumph of socialism. Some of the Liberal leaders have given pledges that they will not cooperate in the organization of a labor government unless the Labor party wins a clear majority; but if labor receives a preponderant vote it will be entitled to take over the government even if it should fail to hold it.

Mr. MacDonald has given out a statement of the foreign policy of the Labor party. It is a weak and perverse policy, giving little encouragement to the hope that world conditions will be bettered by the cooperation of Great Britain. Mr. MacDonald states that a Labor government would "take special concern regarding American affairs," and "would discuss disputed matters with the United States, determined to settle them." That sounds well, but he adds that "some of these matters of offense, like freedom of the seas, have ceased to be important." Evidently he is not aware of the fact that the United States Congress has urged a settlement of this question, if possible, before 1931. Instead of ceasing to be important, the question of freedom of the seas lies at the bottom of Anglo-American relations, and until it is settled it will be useless to strive for an agreement upon naval armaments.

Mr. MacDonald did not see fit to refer to the recent speech of Philip Snowden, who was his chancellor of the exchequer and who would doubtless become a member of a Labor cabinet. Mr. Snowden attacked the British debt agreement with the United States and hinted that this question might be reopened in the event of a Labor victory. Mr. MacDonald does, however, strike a glancing blow at the debt settlement when he criticizes the Baldwin government for its "feebleness," and adds: "If any one owes us we let him off with mere fractions of payments, but if we owe anything we pay to the last farthing." This misleading statement is well calculated to appeal to the prejudice and ignorance of his followers.

Of course, Mr. MacDonald repeats his old blunder in dealing with Russia. Experience teaches him nothing. He is in favor of resuming diplomatic relations with the soviet in spite of its treachery in inciting British labor to violence and rebellion. No doubt Mr. MacDonald is compelled to make this declaration in order to appease the strong communist element that pervades the Labor party; but his intention to keep his word can not be doubted. Thus, within a few weeks it is possible that Great Britain will take a long step toward the disintegration of its social structure by espousing a brand of socialism that is strongly tinctured with communism.

The mixture of defeatism and communism that marks the declarations of the probable prime minister of Great Britain gives little encouragement to those who had hoped that a better understanding could be reached between that country and the United States. If the Labor party should obtain control of the government of England the people of that country would be fortunate if they saved themselves, without hoping to contribute to the general welfare of the world.

GEN. PATRICK'S NOMINATION.

President Hoover has nominated Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, retired, former chief of the Army Air Service, as a member of the Public Utilities Commission to succeed John W. Childress, whose resignation will become effective May 31. Last week the President nominated Mr. Harleigh H. Hartman to succeed Col. Harrison Brand. When Gen. Patrick and Mr. Hartman have been confirmed by the Senate the commission will be complete, the third member being Col. William B. Ladue, Engineer Commissioner of the District, and member ex officio of the Utilities Commission.

Gen. Patrick is an engineer of some 40 years' experience. He was chief engineer of all lines of communication for the A. E. F. He will come to the Utilities Commission well equipped to consider the problems involved in regulating the local utilities and to analyze them from the standpoint of the engineer. His high character, long experience and familiarity with local conditions make him an ideal appointee.

It is to be hoped that the Senate will act quickly on the nominations. The commission has been unorganized for some time and there are several important matters, including the proposed street railway merger, the gas company revaluation, and a new rate agreement with the telephone company that demand early action. Early confirmation of Gen. Patrick and Mr. Hartman is to be desired.

LOANS TO WALL STREET.

The more one studies the conflicting statements and reports on credit, overextension of brokers' loans and the stock market situation in general, the more it is evident that the question is so involved and intricate as to practically defy solution. The Federal Reserve system has its defenders, and they are able to make what appears to be a good case against present conditions. Those who subscribe to the opposite view, however, come along and seem to riddle the arguments of the proponents of forced curtailment. Even the report on "money and credit and their effect on business," prepared by Dr. W. Randolph Burgess, of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, of Harvard, for the economic committee of which President Hoover is chairman, leaves much to be desired.

They say that development of a stock market demand for loans "that seems almost without limit and is impervious to moderate advances in rates" can not fail to affect adversely the "development and functioning of the New York money market as a great and reasonably stable national and world financial center," but they fail to make a satisfactory suggestion for handling the present situation.

Dr. Burgess and Prof. Sprague go to some pains to point out that an active stock market always involves an increase of loans to brokers, but they say that such funds are not withdrawn from use and held in the market, for "brokers' loans are simply one of the various channels through which funds enter into general use throughout the community." Here and there, they say, it may indeed happen that a particular borrower is unable to secure accommodation because those lenders to whom he has access have employed available resources in brokers' loans, but such cases must have been exceptional. Valid criticism of brokers' loans, they conclude, must be concerned "with the more direct effects of this use of financial resources."

The direct effects, of course, concern the issue and marketing of bonds, the granting of acceptance credits, the functioning of the bill market, &c. But practically all the propaganda that has been put out in connection with the campaign against "overextension" has concerned itself with other than the direct effects. The Burgess-Sprague report, therefore, does not clear the muddied waters.

The report concludes that the best method of securing a reasonable measure of stability in the functioning of the New York money market seems to be by the exercise of a restraining influence through the Federal Reserve system. "The conclusion should not be drawn from the lack of success that attended the measures taken thus far," says the report, "that restraint could not be made effective through the Federal Reserve system. The possibilities of effectually restraining intense speculative activity through sharp and even drastic action have not been tested." But "sharp and drastic action" inevitably would affect not only the direct but equally the indirect elements involved, unless, through new legislation, it were made possible to single out the stock markets for individual action, and it is questionable whether such action would be either beneficial or wise.

GOOD NEWS FOR TOURISTS.

The agreement that has finally been reached by the American and French governments to reduce visa fees in both countries from $10 to $2 is good news to every American traveler. It is regarded as the most important step that has been taken to rid American tourists of the visa nuisance, and will no doubt be followed by similar concessions in other countries which make large profits from American travelers.

In spite of the increased travel which the visa reduction will draw to France, the agreement is decidedly favorable to this country. It is estimated that 250,000 Americans visit France each year, paying $2,500,000 to have their passports visaed. The reduced fee will mean a saving of approximately $2,000,000 per year to Americans, but will mean a relatively small saving to Frenchmen, because few travel in this country.

The State Department recently concluded a reciprocal agreement with the Italian government, abolishing visa charges for all nonimmigrants. Germany, Switzerland, Holland and Belgium have voluntarily provided free visas in the hope of attracting more tourists. Their action has no doubt influenced the French government, and the present reduction will react upon England and other countries which still levy a fee on American tourists.

The agreement with France affects only the nonimmigrants entering this country. Other nations which send large numbers of immigrants here will not make such agreements, because practically all of their nationals coming to America would have to pay, while almost none of the Americans visiting foreign ports would pay.

In holding out for a tax on immigrants, which under the present restrictive law can not amount to more than $1,640,000 per year, the United States has been forcing its citizens to pay upward of $8,000,000 annually in visa fees. Complete abolition of visa charges for immigrants and other travelers would therefore be a distinct advantage to citizens of the United States.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE.

In May, 1820, Florence Nightingale was born in northern Italy. She early became interested in hospital work and decided to become a nurse, although until then nursing was not recognized as an honorable profession. It was Florence Nightingale's privilege to elevate nursing and to establish it as a high and noble calling. She laid the foundations of modern, scientific nursing, and her labor among wounded soldiers during the Crimean war, the American Civil War and the Franco-Prussian war marked the birth of the Red Cross movement.

There is some uncertainty as to whether Florence Nightingale was born on the 12th or the 15th of May. The date should be established and marked with appropriate ceremony each year by every civilized nation. The whole world is a debtor to this heroic and saintlike woman.

A Harvard professor sees in radio a means of ending the "babble of tongues." It seems incredible that a Harvard professor should never have heard radio.

At Senator Simmons' instigation the senatorial investigation of conditions in the textile industry has been extended to include the entire country. It might be a good idea to have one grand, all-inclusive investigation of "conditions" here, there and everywhere, after which the Senate could get down to work.

THE GRAF ZEPPELIN

By LEO A. KIERAN,
In the New York World.

The 1929 flying season will be marked this week by the arrival of the Graf Zeppelin on its second American trip from Friedrichshafen. The giant German dirigible, which is scheduled to leave its home port today, should arrive at the naval air station at Lakehurst long before Sunday, carrying twenty passengers and its load of freight in its second demonstration of the practicability of transatlantic air commerce within a year.

The gas burning airship, which eclipses all previous Atlantic carriers in point of speed, has been improved since its last visit, according to the representative of the Zeppelin company in America. In the matter of radio communication, a special broadcasting set has been installed which will enable the airship to keep in constant touch with both sides of the ocean during its voyage. An additional improvement is to be made after the ship arrives by the installation of a Pioneer earth inductor compass.

The hull of the dirigible, which is 778 feet long and 100 feet in maximum diameter, carries 3,700,000 cubic feet of lift gas in its eighteen balloonettes, which are spaced within the interior construction of the rigid frame. In addition there are other balloonettes which carry the fuel gas to operate the five 550-horsepower Maybach engines, which are hung in gondola cars, two on each side and one aft, near the control surfaces. These motors are versatile, both in appetite and direction, as they will run without change on either liquid or gaseous fuel, and can be reversed by shifting the cam shaft by means of a lever on the control board.

The Graf Zeppelin has a pay load capacity of 80,000 pounds. Under its own power, in still air, it has a top speed of 80 miles an hour and carries enough fuel and supplies for a 6,200-mile, nonstop flight at that speed, according to the specifications of its owners, the Luftschiffbau Zeppelin, of Friedrichshafen. Ordinary repairs can be made in full flight.

The interior of the arrangement of the airship, with its facilities for carrying baggage, freight, mail, crew and passengers, is a complete piece of scientific weight distribution. The mail and heavy freight are distributed inside the hull on both sides of the long passageway which runs from the control cabin to the stern of the ship. All this material is loaded in through hatches which are on the under side of the hull, and the weight is so placed as to balance the weight of the passengers and crew, most of whom ride in the forward end.

Accommodations for the twenty passengers in ten small staterooms are in the cabin just behind the control room. The cabin is 98 feet long and 15 feet wide and is cut into seven divisions. In the fore end is the control room, glass inclosed, and containing the helm and instrument boards for the pilot. Immediately behind is the navigating room, from which observations are taken at regular intervals to ascertain the exact position of the ship. This room is fitted with modern instruments and here the course is plotted or replotted according to the weather encountered. The next compartment holds the radio room and gallery, with a small passageway between.

Then comes the large salon in which meals are served. It affords the passengers a lounging place for the long tours of the ship. Another narrow passageway opens from the after wall of the salon to the stern of the ship, and from this the ten staterooms open, each containing an upper and lower berth and two small folding chairs. The lower berths can be made over by day into comfortable divans, while the upper berths are taken down and tucked away underneath.

The gaseous fuel which is burned by the great Maybach engines is one of the most recent developments in aeronautics. It is called blau gas, or blue gas, and is a mixture of ethelyne and butane, both prime volatile hydrocarbons which have only recently been isolated in quantity. By adulteration it has been made slightly heavier than air so that it will flow by gravity to the engines below the containers in the hull, and so that its gradual consumption by the motors will compensate for the slight loss of the hydrogen lifting gas as the ship proceeds on its long trip.

Welcome, Parkers.

New York Herald Tribune: Motorists, accustomed to anything but welcome to such parking places as they may find in cities through which they tour, will be astonished to learn that parking in Atlantic City is not an offense. When cars of visitors are left in spaces forbidden to the natives, the traffic officers attach to them cards which announce that if they will inquire at headquarters they will be told where they may park without violating local traffic rules. Also they are informed that they are welcome to the city.

Atlantic City is, of course, an all-the-year resort whose prosperity is dependent upon visitors. But there is no city in the country which is not, to some extent in the same case, as the efforts of chambers of commerce will testify. Yet few such cities take the trouble to post notices which will enable strangers to find their way through the town, and parking in the neighborhood of a "No Parking" sign is visited with disagreeable consequences, even if it is owing to failure to see the warning. There is hardly a town or city in the country which has not profited by motor travel, yet many of them still put motorists to inconvenience and thus discourage their return. If the Atlantic City experiment is successful, as it promises to be, it can be followed with advantage not only by communities of the same kind, but by every city, town and village in the country.

"If He Is Right, We Are Wrong," the People Cry; "Let Us Hang Him."

By ROBERT QUILLEN

As birds of a feather flock together, so you elect to associate with people much like yourself; and if one of your intimates should begin to spend his idle hours with men you think unworthy of respect, you would say to him: "Why waste your time in that company? What do you see in such fellows?"

Your friend might defend himself by saying: "These men are as Nature made them. I am not their judge. I make no comparisons. They amuse and instruct me. Will the botanist gain great knowledge if he studies nothing but roses?"

If you would discover whether your attitude toward your fellow men is reasonable, compare it with your attitude toward trees.

There are many "races" of trees, and you like best the ones that grow in your native land—not because they are superior, but because they are familiar.

The trees of one family differ from one another in many particulars, and you admire most the ones that are graceful, tall, strong and defiant in the face of storms. The undernourished, sickly, dwarfed and misshapen members of the family do not interest me.

You value above all others the fruit and nut trees. These serve you and pay you a profit.

Next to these you value the hardwood and "evergreen" trees that can be sacrificed to make conveniences for you and to fill your purse.

Thus far your judgment of trees is very similar to your judgment of men, and one is as logical as the other; but no matter how gnarled and weak and useless a tree may be, if it isn't on your premises or supported by your soil, you do not resent its imperfections or scorn to stand in its shade.

Why, then, do man's imperfections offend you?

Because he is a competitor—your rival in a contest of excellence.

If he is unlike you and the fact makes him humble, your contempt will be tinged with respect for his sound judgment of values; but if he is unlike you and yet dares to be content as he is, his very existence is a challenge and an affront. He seems to offer himself as the standard of perfection, and the hurt to your vanity is unpardonable.

We flock with our own kind, and scorn or resent all other kinds, because we cannot admit they are right without confessing ourselves wrong.

Those like us must be Heaven's chosen, for we are Heaven's chosen. Those unlike us must be ostracized, scourged, persecuted and at last exterminated because their continued existence challenges our right to serve as a model of perfection.

Vanity crucifies the nonconformist. His sin is not in being wrong, but in daring to think us in the wrong.

Great men are tolerant because they do not fear comparison; the stupid use stones because logic fails them.

(Copyright, 1929.)

INDIAN PRINCES.

Those who know the Indian native princes through newspaper accounts of their elaborate tours of Europe and England are impressed by their wealth and dignity, and can with difficulty, says the London Morning Post, imagine them engaging with the humblest of their subjects in roughhouse horseplay resembling a freshman-sophomore cane rush. Yet at certain times of the year all dignity is discarded, usually during the traditional festivals, writes a correspondent of the newspaper, who says these festivals are times of great gayety in the Indian native states, but perhaps the merriest is at the June solstice, when scenes recalling the festivals of ancient "Lords of Misrule" are often witnessed.

The ruler and his high officers pass through the city, not clad in silks and jewels, as at other festivals, but in plain white garments. Ruler and ministers alike sit on elephants, all furnished with a plentiful supply of colored water and of talc balls containing a bright pink powder.

From the moment when the procession enters the city it becomes the target of good-humored chaff, of missiles filled with pink liquid, and of bucketfuls of scarlet paint. At corners the ruler and his suite are subjected to a heavy crossfire from the rooftops on either side, and their garments and every visible portion of their person soon partake of the pink hue which is associated with the festival.

All the state servants, Englishmen and Indians alike, participate in the fun. At one point the public works department, forgetting for the moment its customary cares, has erected a formidable barrier enfiladed by a number of the municipal fire engines. Nothing daunted, the procession presses forward in the face of a veritable deluge.

The ruler and his high officers are almost washed off their elephants, but they press through and, thanks to the skillful use of their own missiles, disconcert their antagonists, passing on their way amid a storm of laughter and applause.

It is on such occasions as these that even the outsider can penetrate a little into the real spirit of an Indian state. The people feel themselves so at one with their ruler, who is theirs and theirs alone. He shares their sorrows as well as their joys; to him they look for the redress of grievances when all ordinary means have been exhausted. He throws himself with zest into their amusements; he understands their life as they understand his.

There is little wonder, when such conditions prevail, that the political solidarity of the states is so strong. Communal differences, despite their seriousness, cause comparatively little anxiety in an Indian state. For the ruler and his government are the living, visible embodiment of a tradition which binds together ruler and ruled with a tie which is almost that of the family.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Why Not Try Home Training as a Means of Preventing Crime? Parents Need Educating.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Once more our convening clubwomen have made their annual discovery that crime prevention is the most important question the Nation has to consider. According to newspaper accounts the solution they propose seems to fall into five equal parts, listed thus: Sex knowledge, income tax reduction, sewage disposal facilities, intensified public schooling and character training in the home.

Why not try giving first place to the home? Everything else has been tried without conspicuous success. Our young criminals are overschooled and undereducated. If parents do not return to consciousness rather soon, our civilization is doomed. Theirs is the failure; theirs is the responsibility. The church instructs; the school instructs; the home, and the home only, can educate. The church and the school may say to the child: You should keep the commandments. But parents can and must compel the child to keep the commandments until his character is formed to resist temptation.

The causes of failure and of crime are nearly all more or less the outcome of a domestic system that failed the child during the early and impressionable years, before schooling should begin. These causes are idleness, carelessness, impulsiveness, mental confusion, inability to sustain attention, to prolong effort, to profit by past mistakes of self and others. These causes of failure are the result of habits formed and set before the age of seven.

Let us begin education at the right end. Back to the home is the great and only crime preventive. Educating parents is far more effective than schooling children.

ELLA FRANCES LYNCH.

Designers of Great Falls Bridge Have Taken Scenic and Traffic Features Into Account.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The comments of Mr. Will C. Barnes in a recent issue of The Post, on the subject of the Great Falls Bridge, are pertinent and of great interest to the undersigned, as the designing engineers of this structure.

Careful consideration has been given to the prospective needs of automobilists in the plans now being prepared, and the capacity of the bridge will be ample to satisfy all reasonable requirements for many years to come.

The roadway capacity is estimated at more than 5,000 cars per hour maximum, which if reduced to a reasonable average spread over a driving period of, say, 16 hours, would indicate a conservative total capacity of some 50,000 cars per day.

These would be sufficient to transport approximately 35 per cent of the population of the entire metropolitan district of Washington; many more than are likely ever to want to cross the river at this point in any one day for many years to come.

And, if traffic should warrant it, needless to say the bridge company would be willing to widen the structure to take care of all demands.

With respect to the scenic facilities of the bridge, these will be well taken care of by an open iron railing of simple but dignified design, calculated to offer the least possible interference with the view of the falls by automobile passengers crossing the structure.

Commodious sidewalk bays are provided in the plans where pedestrian sightseers may stand or sit in comfort, entirely outside of traffic, and view the scenery at leisure; and traffic regulations permitting the limited parking of cars, at all times except during actual rush hours, will be in effect.

The suggestions of Mr. Barnes are much appreciated, and he will be glad of the assurance that the rights of sightseers will be safeguarded.

Bob Quillen Stirs Up a Hornet's Nest When He Hints That Poets and Artists Are Mere Fools and Jesters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your Robert Quillen of ye editorial page got some of what is coming to him this morning from one Otto Simon. In a recent issue Quillan classed authors, actors, artists, musicians and the like as court fools. So Mr. Simon modifies his rebuke by commenting that a statement may be so fallacious as to need little protest, that a jury would not even leave the box. For this reason I had not intended taking any public notice of Mr. Quillan's remarks, thinking his liver or else his typewriter might be out of order. However, a jury of Babbitts might render a verdict in favor of Quillan, so here goes.

To the material mind of Quillan only those who cater to physical needs have man-size jobs, while those who cater to spiritual and mental needs are court fools. It is the commercial element, according to Quillan, who build up civilization. So he advises the youth of the country to pick jobs in big corporations so as to be real he-men, or words to that effect.

Now I must confess all this stands me on my head. Here I had been going about thinking just the other way round. I had thought of clerks and officers of soulless corporations, where individuality is submerged in the organization, as slaves of the machine. But a genius capable of doing creative work is to me not only a man, but a super-man, and I stand before his works in awe and wonder. As for building civilization—that is beyond its rough, primitive stages—I had understood that culture is the measure of the degree of higher civilization. In fact, culture is the degree from which man is removed from the ape. Man does not acquire culture through commercial establishments and factories, but through the higher arts.

However, Quillan might have been thinking of custard pie movie actors jazz, chromos and authors of smutty stories who entertain the boobs when he made his comparison with the time clock and pay envelope brigade.

Economic Experts, Headed by Hoover, Stress "Leisure Industries'" Growth.

PEOPLE SAVING BILLIONS

(United Press.)

How widely the average citizen has become a shareholder in the country's big business is shown in a report yesterday by a committee of economic experts, of which President Hoover was chairman, which estimates the number of stock owners in busines enterprises at over 17,000,000. The number was only 2,000,000 immediately after the war.

The report comments also on the widespread investment by the average citizen of his savings in the stock market, but reaches no conclusion on the controversial speculative situation, except to say that a "credit stringency" is indicated. It explains there is popular confidence in the Federal Reserve System, and says the ability of the system to move available credit where it is needed is among the advances of recent years.

The committee also made the interesting finding that leisure created by increased economic efficiency is a corner stone of prosperity, furnishing a ready market for goods and has been capitalized by the business man, who panders to it and develops it, thus creating capital and employment. This "leisure industry"—radio, motion pictures, theaters, fine arts, travel, books, magazines, automobile and tourist trade—has given employment to many thrown out of work by displacement of men with machines, one of the disturbing developments of recent years.

The report, a study of recent economic changes, is made by a committee of sixteen experts, of which President Hoover was chairman and which he appointed as Secretary of Commerce. It is an outgrowth of the 1921 unemployment conference of which Mr. Hoover was chairman.

Two other reports had been made previously, one on business cycles and unemployment, the other on seasonal operations in the construction industry. The final report covers the period 1922-27. It was begun in January, last year, and completed in February, this year. It traces economic development for that period, attempts to gauge the factors involved and generally holds out a picture of unparalleled progress and satisfactory conditions.

The committee points out that previously the savings funds of the American people were not sufficient for capital requirements in this country, whereas in the period covered, "not only the earnings and savings of the people supplied the additional capital for financing the rapid development of industry, but in addition they furnished several billions for loans to foreign countries."

"Progress has been made toward more stable employment in seasonal industries," the report says, "yet 'technological' unemployment, resulting from the displacement of workers by improved machinery and methods, has attracted attention."

The factors making for present prosperity, the committee says, "appear in part to be accidental and in part the consequences of an advanced economic point of view." Industry has speeded up, with record-breaking production, and yet its products are absorbed, it is added. The committee points out many interesting developments which have permitted this high-pressure production and absorption without saturation.

RAILROAD PURCHASE OF STOCK ASSAILED

I. C. C. Orders Pennsylvania to Explain Wabash and Lehigh Valley Deals.

ANTITRUST LAW IS CITED

(Associated Press.)

A complaint charging the Pennsylvania Railroad were violating the antitrust law by acquiring stock ownership in the Wabash and Lehigh Valley systems was issued yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The railroad and its principal investment subsidiary, the Pennsylvania Co. were notified to show cause in Washington, June 24, why an order should not be issued requiring them to divest themselves of all holdings, direct or indirect, in the Wabash and Lehigh Valley systems.

Using terms very similar to those incorporated in like complaints against the Baltimore & Ohio and the Kansas City Southern, which met with opposition because of the purchase of other railroads, the commision asserted that the effect of the Pennsylvania's actions in acquiring Wabash and Lehigh Valley stock would be "to restrain commerce in certain sections and communities."

The Pennsylvania Railroad itself and the Pennsylvania Co., acting "without the approval and authorization of the Interstate Commerce Commission and in violation of section 7, of the Clayton act," were said to have acquired large portions of the capital stock of the other two railroads.

The Pennsylvania Co. was said to have purchased between February 15, 1927, and June 26, 1928, 312,900 shares of Wabash preferred and 362,900 shares of Wabash common. The Wabash Co. has for some time owned 231,329 shares of Lehigh Valley Railroad common stock, the complaint continued, and, in addition, between April 25, 1928, and June 26, 1928, the Pennsylvania "did indirectly acquire a large part of the capital stock of the Lehigh Valley, namely, 365,039 shares, without the approval and authorization of the commission.

"The effect of the acquisition by the Pennsylvania through and by means of its subsidiary, the Pennsylvania Co., of stock of the Wabash and stock of the Lehigh Valley may be to substantially lessen competition between the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Wabash," the commission concluded, "and between the Pennsylvania and the Lehigh Valley."

The Pennsylvania Railroad and the Pennsylvania Co. were notified to file answers to the charges within 30 days, and its officials to appear at the hearing. By a recent announcement of the Pennsylvania, it was indicated that the holdings of Lehigh Valley and Wabash stocks, together with other investments, had been transferred to the Pennroad Corporation, stock in which is being tendered to Pennsylvania stockholders.

Commission complaint yesterday, however, did not touch upon this phase of the proceeding. The Pennsylvania holdings of Wabash and Lehigh Valley have been under investigation by commission agents for several months, but no direct statement touching them was issued prior to the publication of yesterday's complaint.

RUIZ MOVES TO END RELIGIOUS WARFARE

Monsignor of Mexico Sends Telegrams to Bishop in Country for Attitude.

DELEGATE WILL CONFER

(Associated Press.)

A move aimed toward ending the conflict between the Mexican Government and the Catholic Church in that country was taken yesterday by Mgr. Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, Archbishop of Michoacan and a leader of the Mexican Roman Catholic hierarchy.

Telegrams to the 30 bishops of Mexico, requesting their attitude toward parleys between officials of the church and President Portes Gil, have been drafted by Archbishop Ruiz. The dispatch of these messages is to coincide with the return to Washington of Mgr. Pietro Fumasoni Biondi, apostolic delegate to the Catholic Church in the United States, who was expected last night from Rome, where he has conferred with the Vatican on the Mexican question.

Since twenty of the Mexican bishops are in the United States, prompt replies are expected. There appeared to be considerable optimism in official Catholic circles today that a majority of the bishops would favor the negotiations, in which case instructions then will be asked from Rome.

Favorable action by the Pope, in relation to the negotaitions is expected here and it is expected that Archbishop Ruiz and Mgr. Biondi will be given wide latitude to proceed in the matter.

President Portes Gil has publicly expressed his willingness to discuss informally with Archbishop Ruiz and other dignitaries of the church questions regarding both the fulfillment and interpretation of church laws.

29 times across the continent and only $65.00 for repairs and Chris Rasmussen says this record is due to "Standard" Motor Oil

MEET Chris Rasmussen of Perth Amboy, New Jersey, who owns and drives a big MACK truck, and whose record for repairs during the last 100,000 miles shows only $65.00. From the beginning "Standard" Motor Oil has been used exclusively in the grade specified by the lubrication chart. Morning, noon and night, stiff hauls, through traffic, in the country, the truck has never once faltered. Ready to deliver the goods at a minimum of up-keep and repair costs.

Mr. Rasmussen says "I consider the performance of my MACK truck not exceptional in view of the fact that the truck motor was broken in on 'Standard' Motor Oil and not one gallon of another oil has ever been used".

But whether it be in a mammoth 7-ton truck or in a modern high-speed motor car, "Standard" Motor Oil can be depended on to give the maximum of service with the minimum of cost for repairs.

For "Standard" Motor Oil is an oil of greater oiliness—made to hold its body under all sorts and conditions of service—specially processed to cling to and protect all friction points. It's the first choice of millions—it's a premium oil at a popular price.

LEAGUE PEACE ACT UPHELD BY SWEDEN

Geneva Receives From Stockholm First Notice of Formal Accession.

AIMS AT CONCILIATION

Geneva, May 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The first step toward bringing into force the general act of the 1928 assembly of the League of Nations, the object of which is to make the maintenance of peace compulsory, was taken by the Swedish government today when it deposited with the secretariat here its notification of accession to the act.

Sweden thereby accepts reciprocally with other countries embracing the general act the mutual right to summon each other before the permanent court of international justice at The Hague in all disputes involving conflict of rights. It also mutually grants and receives the right to summon other nations accepting the act before a conciliation commission in every kind of dispute and further recognizes the court's right to enjoin obligatory status quo pending peaceful adjudication of controversies.

Stockholm, however, for the time being, does not accept compulsory arbitration as the last alternative for disputes which can not be settled by the court or by conciliation.

The Danish and Norwegian Parliaments are also considering similar accessions, the league is informed, while the Belgian and French governments have bills pending for complete acceptance of all the articles of the general act.

Both the Liberal and Labor parties of Great Britain have given preelection pledges to accede to the assembly's pronunciamento, which is regarded here as the most radical machinery thus far devised for all-inclusive compulsory maintenance of world peace.

League circles are predicting that a concerted drive for "organization of peace" in accordance with the covenant, the Kellogg pact and the general act will be made during the sessions of the September assembly.

Fliers Battle Weather.

Columbus, Ohio, May 14 (A.P.).—United States Army air forces, divided for maneuvers into a "red" army and a "blue" army, tonight were fighting a battle against weather conditions and preparing to begin their sham battle tomorrow night.

The battle against the elements kept many of the planes from reporting at Dayton and Columbus, headquarters of the blue and the red armies, respectively. Weather conditions in the South, East and North made it impossible for some of the ships to take off.

Fifty-two ships, however, were flown to their battle stations and tonight were in hangars at Dayton, where the pilots discussed the maneuvers to begin shortly after midnight Wednesday. Arrivals today included 38 planes of the Third Attack Group and 14 craft of the Eleventh Bombardment Group from Rockwell Field, Calif.

The fliers will pass tomorrow studying the terrain and tuning motors for the beginning of "hostilities," which will be carried on under war conditions—early morning flight patrols, night bombardment flights and little sleep for the "lucky" one who will remain at the bases of operations.

Call at Scott Field.

Scott Field, Ill., May 14 (A.P.).—Thirty-three pursuit planes and two Army transports of the Air Service third attack group, Galveston, Tex., left Scott Field this morning for Wright Field to participate in aerial maneuvers over Columbus, Ohio, beginning Thursday.

A squadron of sixteen pursuit planes from San Diego, Calif., under command of Maj. Carl Spatz, senior officer of the endurance flight of the Army plane Question Mark, arrived at Scott Field from Muskogee, Okla., as the Third Attack Goup was getting away. After refueling, Maj. Spatz' squadron followed the other planes to Wright Field.

Local Planes Arrive.

While 22 Army planes floundered through the fog over the Alleghany Mountains to forced landings yesterday, a formation of 4 ships from Bolling Field fought through safely to Dayton, Ohio, in a little more than four hours' flying time.

The four planes from the local field, which took off at about 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, consisted of two Curtiss Hawks and two Falcons. The Hawks, single place pursuit ships, were piloted by Capt. Harold M. McClelland, of the trainings and operations section, office of the chief of Air Corps, and Maj. Ross E. Rowell, U. S. M. C.

In one of the Falcon observation planes were Brig. Gen. B. D. Fulois, assistant chief of Air Corps, and Capt. Frank O'D. Hunter. In the other were Maj. Ira Longanecker, chief of the information section, office of the chief of Air Corps, and Lieut. Arthur I. Ennis.

All four planes, maintaining their formation throughout the flight, landed at Wright Field at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. They passed over the route along which the Langley Field planes were scattered by the adverse weather.

CONSCRIPTION BILL ASSAILED BY LEGION

Measure, Sponsored by Good, Decried for Ignoring Plan to Ban Profiteering.

EQUAL SERVICE IS URGED

An attack on the War Department's "man power" bill, introduced recently in Congress at the request of Secretary of War Good, was launched yesterday by John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the American Legion national legislative committee.

Charging that the War Department's plan of conscripting men between the ages of 18 and 45 for fighting, in the event of war, and ignoring Government control over factories, transportation, food, materials, money, labor and profiteering is a theory of national defense which was discarded at the end of the World War, the Legion has announced its opposition to the present bill.

"Equal service from all and special profit for none has been the watchword of the Legion since the war," Taylor said in discussing the War Department's measure. "This is provided under the universal draft bill which the Legion has backed for seven years and which is now pending in Congress under the name of the Reed-Wainwright rsolution.

"The War Department bill would draft the youth of our Nation to go into the trenches, but is silent upon the war profiteer, the control of prices, food, industry, capital, labor and profits in the event of war. Under the War Department plan, the unequal burdens of past wars would be continued into future wars. Under the Legion's plan, in the event of war, there would be no slackers and no profiteers. The Legion is opposed to this War Department bill."

They say "Opportunity knocks but once." Every day the Classified columns of The Washington Post carry opportunities in most every line of business.

Authoress Guilty On Fraud Charge

Elizabeth Murray Admits Trying to Obtain $1,000 From Oil "Queen."

Amarillo, Tex., May 14 (A.P.).—Elizabeth Murray, writer, lecturer and woman's club organizer, pleaded guilty here today to a charge of using the mails to defraud. The court deferred sentence.

Miss Murray, the daughter of a former Iowa State senator, was charged with having used the mails in an effort to induce Lela Mae Barnum, Texas Panhandle oil queen, to pay $1,000 for membership in the Woman's History Foundation, Inc., which Miss Murray represented she had organized and which she said would build a clubhouse in Washington.

The Government charged the sale of membership in the organization was fraudulent and alleges that Miss Murray had used the names of nationally prominent men and women without permission in her promotion work.

Woman Guilty of Aiding Murderer's Jail Escape

Pottsville, Pa., May 14 (A.P.).—Mrs. Clara Fessler, Summit Station school teacher, today was convicted of aiding and abetting the escape from jail on March 9 of Riverez Miquel, executed for murder after he was recaptured. Miquel, who had murdered a girl, was executed March 25.

Mrs. Fessler made two confessions, police said, which were read at the trial. The first said she gave to Miquel the pistol and ammunition he used in making his escape. The second said she gave the gun and shells to a prison guard, and that Miquel reimbursed her for the purchase of the revolver.

A Testimonial from you all know- A man

NO need to waste time on long-winded introductions. You know this man. He passes you daily on the street or out in the country. He goes everywhere, has friends everywhere--and now he wants all his friends and aquaintances to know just what he thinks about AMOCO-GAS!

"I have never flown across an ocean, swum the channel, starred in a moving picture nor had my name in the Social Register. But three hundred and sixty-five days in the year--in fair weather and in foul, I drive my automobile, for business and for pleasure. It must deliver dependable service whether I have the family out for a pleasure trip or whether I'm driving on business.

I am not a millionaire, so I want maximum mileage for every cent I spend. Although AMOCO-GAS costs a little more per gallon, it costs far less in the end. I glide over the steepest hills in high, get away before the other fellow in traffic and I have forgotten that there is such a thing as a knock.

I've used every gas on the market--but now I'm telling you in black and white that there's not one to even compare with AMOCO-GAS. I'm sold."

Who wrote it? Well, if you must know, it was that man we all know and know well--Mr. Everyday Motorist!

BULLET NOW SOUGHT IN STUDENT SLAYING

Earth at Spot Where Youth's Body Was Found Is Dug Up to Be Sifted.

KERCHIEF CLEW FAILS

Windsor, Conn., May 14 (A.P.).—The investigation of the death of Walter Treadway Huntington, Harvard student, whose body was found in a swamp on the outskirts of Windsor about a week ago, tonight was apparently back where it stood 24 hours ago.

Chief among today's developments were:

A statement by County Detective Edward J. Hickey that a handkerchief with a spot of blood on its was found in Huntington's mother's car, and his denial that it had any bearing on the case.

The story of David de Moulpied that he had seen a group of persons on the Huntington veranda shortly after 11 o'clock on the night of Huntington's death—a story which, however, Hickey weakened as a clew by announcing his belief that the group consisted of Walter's sister and two high school boys, who were escorting her home from a concert.

No Motive Found, Says Coroner.

A declaration by Coroner J. Gilbert Calhoun that no motive for either suicide or homicide had been developed to his satisfaction; that he was by no means ready to give a verdict now, and that heelprints around the body were not definite enough to be attributed to any one.

A search with magnets, shovels and picks in the swamp for the missing pistol and bullet.

Hickey himself dug a hole 3 feet in diameter and 3 feet deep at the spot where Huntington's head lay. The earth was put into bags and brought here to be dried out and sifted for the bullet.

All the ground about where the body lay was removed to a depth of about 8 inches, and this also will be dried out and sifted.

Hickey said a handerchief with a single drop of blood on it had been found in Mrs. Huntington's automobile.

Kerchief Given Little Consideration.

"But that doesn't mean anything," he added. "Any one might leave a handkerchief with a bloodstain on it in an automobile. It might have been used to wipe a pimple or a shave cut."

At cambridge, Mass., Grace Robinson and Frank Dolan, representatives of a New York newspaper, were sentenced to three months in the house of correction today after having admitted a finding on charges of breaking and entering and attempted larceny. They were arrested yesterday in the room Huntington had occupied. They appealed and were released under bonds of $500 each until tomorrow on the understanding that additional bonds of $500 each would be provided.

New Directory of Congress Lists Strange Biographies

Representative Newhall Admits Entering "Musical Work," While LaGuardia's Story Consists Only of His Name; Three Women Write Briefly.

The new Congressional Directory, a who's who of the Seventy-first Congress, made its debut yesterday wearing a pea-green dress. In it are listed the names of all the members of the Senate and House, most of the officials of the Federal departments and 349 newspaper men who cover Congress.

Speaker Nicholas Longworth, who plays the violin, no doubt will be interested in the biography of J. Lincoln Newhall, a new Republican member from Kentucky. Through the pages of the directory Newhall tells the world that he resigned his job as store keeper gauger in 1905 to engage in "musical work" and in 1913 became director of music in the Covington public schools.

The successor of former Representative Thomas L. Blanton, Representative R. Q. Lee (Democrat), of Texas, gives his biography in six lines, whereas Blanton used up more than a page. The shortest biography, if it could be called that, was inserted by Representative La Guardia (Republican), of New York. He merely gives his name.

The three new women members—Mrs. McCormick, of Illinois; Mrs. Pratt, of New York, and Mrs. Owen, of Florida—require only a comparatively small amount of space to tell about themselves.

Many members proudly point to their military careers, but Representative Oscar De Priest, the colored member from Illinois, says he has "no military service."

Two or three members cite the fact that they were once volunteer firemen, while big John Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, tells how he left the throttle of his locomotive to come to Congress.

OIL BURNING AIRPLANE FLIES FROM DETROIT TO LANGLEY

flight, the first cross-country venture of the Packard Diesel, had been released there, and he was authorized to allow a cursory examination of the engine by newspaper men and other nontechnical and noncompetitive observers. He also demonstrated the motor's spectacular method of starting with an explosion from several of its cylinders at the mere pressure of a button within the cabin.

"Smells like gunpower to me," said Maj. Thomas G. Lamphier, operations manager of Transcontinental Air Transport, sniffing the air in the hangar following the burst of smoke and flames from the Diesel's exhaust. "How do you do it"

Woolson looked at the newspaper men and smiled. "I guess you'll have to leave us a little mystery," he said.

And this was as much as any of those in the flying industry, who gather here once a year to get new data and exchange ideas on progress and development in aviation, were to learn about his motor. But, meantime, while the makers of modern gasoline motors for aircraft say that "the airplane and the Diesel engine are ten years apart," hordes of workmen are busy in Detroit erecting a factory where the Packard Co. is to go into production on this type of aircraft engine.

Windmill Plane Exhibited.

The most spectacular event of the aircraft conference was a series of demonstration flights by the giervo autogiro, or "windmill plane," manufacturing rights to which, in this country, are controlled by Pitcairn Aviation, Inc., of Philadelphia.

Harold Pitcairn took the machine aloft and demonstrated its ability to descend almost vertically yet still remain in fully controlled flight. It was the first public exhibition of the freakish flying machine before an official aeronautical group in this country, and the leaders of American aviation in thought and achievement were like children in their amazement and delight over the machine's performance.

Conference delegates and visitors were taken on a tour of the national advisory committee's extensive laboratories here and shown the work being done toward solving problems of aviation and in the perfection of existing devices tending to increase the efficiency of aircraft. This includes the venturi "speed cowling" which has been the outstanding development of the committee to date and the method developed by it for determining air pressures on various parts of an airplane in actual flight, a phase of aerodynamic research that has been of vast value to the industry.

High Speeds Studied.

One of the most breath-taking devices shown was the oscilloscope, an instrument devised to "step down" high-speed operations so that they may be studied in slow motion with the human eye. This apparatus, operating on the principle of the neon flash, is so effective that it is possible to glue a newspaper clipping to a propeller, turn the latter at 6,000 revolutions a minute, and still read the clipping as though the propeller were standing still.

Among the notables attending the conference were Orville Wright, the "first man to fly;" William P. MacCracken, jr., and David S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretaries for Aviation, respectively, in the Departments of Commerce and Navy; Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the Army Air Corps; Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics; Harry F. Guggenheim, president of the Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics; Charles L. Lawrence, president of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation; Lieut. James H. Doolittle, Army speed pilot and fog-flying expert for the Guggenheim Fund; Capt. Emory S. Land, of the same organization, and Grover C. Loening, designer of the Loening amphibian plane.

AIRPORT ENGINEERS GATHER AT PARLEY

250 Experts Meet in Cleveland to Study Needs of U. S. on Plane Fields.

COL. BLEE IN ATTENDANCE

Cleveland, Ohio, May 14 (A.P.).—Impressed that the air offers the last opportunity for speedy and expanded transportation, 250 engineers, architects, contractors and Government officials will convene here tomorrow to form a definite program for the guidance of Nation-wide airport development.

Although differing on technical details, the delegates will have one common idea, that the mistakes of railway and city planners in making tracks and streets inadequate for the future must not be duplicated.

The delegates, who will be in session for three days under sponsorship of the National Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, believe that airport development presents the most important problems in the aviation industry.

They believe that it will not be long until cities with the best airports will outrank those with great railway terminals.

A long list of questions are for discussion. Some deal with important technical details; some pertain to the aspects or architectural beauty, and others with the question of suburban locations, perhaps 100 miles from great centers and connected by air taxies that will land on building roofs and wharves.

The convention is expected to amalgamate the best thoughts of each authority.

Francis Keally, of Columbia University School of Architecture at New York, will discuss the architectural future of air terminals.

Andrew H. Heermance, director of aviation for the City of Miami, Fla., will tell of the hotel accommodations the new Miami Airport affords, similar to those in Europe, where airports have night clubs, hotels and restaurants.

The size and location of airports will be discussed by Gavin Hadden, New York civil engineer. The drainage problem, so important for safe landings, will be considered by Wendell P. Miller, Columbus, Ohio, drainage engineer.

Col. H. H. Blee, chief of the division of airports and aeronautical information, Department of Commerce, will lay before delegates a review of pertinent airport problems. Addresses also will be by Capt. Clarence M. Knox, Hartford, Conn., vice president in charge of airports, Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, and F. H. Frankland New York, manager of technical service, American Institute of Steel Construction.

Chicago, May 14 (U.P.).—Merger of the National Bank of the Republic and the Chicago Trust Co., with combined assets and liabilities in excess of $200,000,000, was approved today at a joint meeting of the directorates of the two institutions.

The new bank will be the third largest in the city.

Autogiro Plane to Fly To Philadelphia Today

The Cierva autogiro, which created a stir at Bolling Field Monday when it was landed by Harold F. Pitcairn, will return through Washington today from Langley, where it was exhibited yesterday to delegates and guests at the conference of the National Advisory Committee for Aernautics. Monday's trip, which was without incident despite bad weather, was the longest ever made by a helicopter type of airplane.

Pitcairn's autogiro, which was made in England, carries a number of improvements added at the Pitcairn factory in Philadelphia. Three new models are being built which will eliminate many of the objectionable features of the present type, Pitcairn said while he was here.

Man Dead, Woman Dying After Shooting in Hotel

Birmingham, Ala., May 14 (A.P.).—Police answering a call to a hotel here today found a man dead and a woman dying. The couple had registered yesterday as Mr. and Mrs. John Shelby, of Massillon, Ohio.

Shots were heard in the room and the police were summoned by the manager of the hotel. The man was found across the bed with an automatic pistol near by. The woman was on the steps just outside the room with a bullet in her head. The man had been shot near the heart. Police expressed the belief that the shooting was a case of suicide after attempted murder.

RELIGOUS LIBERTY ASKED

Moscow, May 14 (A.P.).—Removal of constitutional restrictions on religious practices is soon to be proposed to the Soviet Congress.

Alexei I. Rykoff, president of the Council of People's Commissars, today told delegates to the congress they would soon be invited to vote on such an amendment to the constitution.

The decrees fighting religion had proved to bring harm as well as benefit, he said. President Rykoff added that Congress would be called upon to ratify a constitutional amendment providing for separation of church and state, church and schools, and granting all citizens the right to religious practice as well as antireligious propaganda.

It appeared from the speech of the president that the Soviet was not to abandon its attempts to discredit religions, but simply to proceed along different lines by, in effect, removing the stimulus of persecution.

"Administrative measures as well as decrees fighting religion," he said, "frequently bring not only benefit but harm. At this session you will ratify a constitutional amendment providing that, in order to secure for the toilers real freedom of conscience, church separates from state, school from church, and all citizens have the right of religious practice as well as of antireligious propaganda.

"This means that we sponsors of the fight on religious fog not only intend to take compulsory administrative measures against religion, but constitutionally recognize freedom of religious practices. The fight on religion can succeed only if linked with mass progress and with deep penetration in the masses of scientific knowledge and culture."

Birth-Control Clinic Raid Cases Quashed

New York, May 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The police raid of April 15 on the birth control clinic ended today in a complete victory for Mrs. Margaret Sanger, founder of the clinic, when Magistrate Abraham Rosenbluth threw the case out of court and freed the five staff nurses who had been taken to jail after the raid by Policewoman Mary A. Sullivan.

Magistrate Rosenbluth declared that the law was plain and that the only question was the good faith of the doctor, or nurse acting under a doctor's direction.

Capital Army Engineers Second at Rifle Meet

With a score of 3,367 out of a possible 3,500, the 121st Engineers, of this city, finished second in the regimental team rifle championship matches this year, it was announced yesterday by the National Rifle Association.

The Twenty-fourth Infantry, a colored regiment stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., won the match with a score of 3,382. Other high scorers were the Seventh Infantry, Vancouver Barracks, Washington, third, with 3,340, and the Third Infantry, Fort Snelling, Minn., fourth with 3,293.

START OF ZEPPELIN'S FLIGHT TO U. S. DELAYED BY FRANCE

came when Dr. Eckener called together the newspaper correspondents here for the start late in the afternoon. He said he had applied fourteen days ago for permission to fly across France, but the French foreign office simply failed to reply.

Since weather reports indicated that strong storms were blowing over the English Channel, Dr. Eckener deemed it essential that he cross southern France toward the Bay of Biscay.

Germany's present agreement with France provides that aircraft carrying neither radio nor photographic apparatus may fly over France without special permission. But airships like the Graf Zeppelin, equipped with radio and photographic apparatus, must obtain a special permit.

Complaint by France.

"The German foreign office told me today that the French foreign office had made remarks about our having flown over Le Creusot munitions works on our first voyage to America, Dr. Eckener declared.

"But this is nonsense. Le Creusot lay on a straight line from Besancon to the ocean, naturally from a height of 400 meters we couldn't see anything.

"The French also said that we had flown over the forbidden area of Toulon, but this is untrue as well. I carefully refrained from approaching this area."

Dr. Eckener said that this was the third time he had had "schweinerei (piggishness) with the French."

"They delayed the permit for our first American flight and also for the second trip to the Orient. It is sheer insanity," insisted the Zeppelin's commander. "They'll grant it yet, I suppose. But they'll do it with gnashing teeth," he concluded.

American Woman Passenger.

Two incidents today relieved the monotony of the passengers, all of whom arrived yesterday and today and who are counting the hours until the Zeppelin's departure.

One was the mysterious arrival of Mrs. Mary Pierce, of 299 Park avenue, New York City, the only woman among the eighteen passengers who are to make the flight. She entered the Kurgarten Hotel secretly at midnight, after speeding across Italy, Switzerland and Germany with her maid and her chauffeur.

At 9 o'clock this morning Mrs. Pierce appeared at the Zeppelin ticket office.

"Here I am. I want passage to the United States. What is the price?" she said.

She laid down $2,000 with a "Very well, here you are."

Mrs. Pierce requested the ticket agent not to divulge her name, and was visibly annoyed when she learned that the newspaper corerspondents had discovered her identity. She remained incommunicado during the day.

Young Gorilla Arrives.

The other diversion was the arrival of the 3-year-old female gorilla, Susi. She was brought to the Graf Zeppelin about 4:30 p. m. in a small cage with a glass window on one side and bars on top. She was placed in a cage in the cabin of Capt. Von Schiller, chief navigating officer of the airship.

Susi has been provided with many straw blankets such as she is accustomed to use at night and large quantities of bananas, oranges and bottles of milk have been shipped on her account for the voyage.

One of the most valuable single pieces in the cargo is a painting by Rubens.

Paris, May 14 (A.P.).—The French foreign office said tonight that it was mystified by the statement of Dr. Hugo Eckener that failure to receive permission to fly over France had caused postponement of the start of the Graf Zeppelin for America.

The foreign office insisted that authorization had been given some time ago and that there had been no question of revoking it. It was pointed out that on the last flight to the Mediterranean not only did the French allow the dirigible to cruise over their country but provided an honorary escort of French planes during part of the trip.

It was considered here that weather was a greater cause for the postponement than the matter of permission. A gale was blowing off the Britanny Coast today with such force as to sink a fishing boat with its crew of three.

U. S. Officer Aboard.

Lieut. Comdr. Vincent A. Clarke, of the United States Navy, will be one of the passengers on the Graf Zeppelin on its trip to the United States, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Lieut. Comdr. Clarke is attached to the Rigid Airship Training and Experimental Squadron at Lakehurst. He recently went to Europe to make the trip to the United States on the Zeppelin.

HOSPITAL MARRIAGE IS HALTED BY DEATH

ments were being made to obtain a license when the girl lapsed into unconsciousness, and those at the bedside knew that further plans were futile.

The young woman is said to have taken poison by mistake for medicine Thursday. She was entertaining Murphy at her home and left him to get a headache cure. When she returned to the room in which Murphy was waiting she became violently ill.

Murphy hurried to a nearby drug store for medicine, but when he returned Miss Bates had discovered the mistake and her fiance took her to George Washington University Hospital, where she was treated by Dr. Grace Purse, of the hospital staff, and Dr. F. A. Hornaday, house physician at the Mayflower Hotel. The young woman succumbed last night at 7:30 o'clock.

A police investigation into the girl's death was started last night by Lieut. Edward J. Kelly, of the homicide squad, and Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt ordered that an autopsy be performed on the body this morning to ascertain the amount of poison in the body, and to determine how large a dose could ordinarily be taken by mistake. It was reported to him that Miss Bates had taken approximately 30 grains of a very deadly poison.

Murphy, who is a salesman, was at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Murphy, last night, but refused to make any statement in regard to his fiancee's death. It was learned, however, that he and Miss Bates had been friends since childhood and had been engaged for some time.

Electric Company Fights Injunction

Potomac Asks Restraints on Meter Order Be Removed.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to dismiss four recent injunction suits brought against the electric company and the Public Utilities Commission to restrain execution of an order of the commission doing away with the practice of submetering electric current in office buildings and apartment houses.

In answering the suits the electric company declared the four injunction seekers had failed in their complaints to show that they will suffer any real injury or that they are franchised to remeter and sell electricity. The company also charged it is unlawful to purchase electric current and resell it.

The injunction petitions were filed on behalf of the operators of the Adams Building, 1333-35 F street northwest; the Washington Convention Hall Co., Fifth and K streets northwest; the Arcade Market and amusement hall, Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, and the Monmouth Hotel, 1819 G street northwest. Attorneys S. R. Bowen and John S. Barbour appeared for the electric company. Hearings on the company's motion to dismiss were scheduled for Friday.

Firemen Begin Course In Advanced First Aid

Thirty firemen started in an advanced first aid class at the District Chapter of the American Red Cross yesterday under instruction of Ben Gammage, a Red Cross teacher.

The firemen who were recruited from the various stations will be taught up to date methods in first aid work in an intensive course, which will conclude Thursday. Those who pass the examination will be given special Red Cross certificates of graduation. Firemen classes in first aid are also being conducted at the Chevy Chase and Takoma Park engine houses, under direction of Ira Lee Law.

Automobiles pass from the hands of original ownership, not because they are worn out, but due many times to the desire for a different or later model. Dealers use the classified columns of The Post to find sale for them. Perhaps the very car you are looking for is to be found there.

Hidden Electric Wire Kills Boy and Dog, Hurts Brother

Children, Playing in Woods of New York, Stumble on Current as They Reach for Violets; Sister Runs Screaming for Aid; Little Hope for Lad.

Sterlington, N. Y., May 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—While playing with their police dog in the woods near their home here today, Joseph McClintock, jr., 9; his brother, Billy, 8, and sister, Gene, 5, spied a choice patch of violets growing in shrubbery, twined about a fallen oak tree. Joseph crawled into the shrubbery, reached for the violets and then screamed. He had grasped a live electric light wire.

Billy went to the rescue, became entangled in the writhing wire and was shocked to death. Lady Beaudet, the police dog, met with the same fate when she caught Billy's clothing in her teeth and tried to drag him out.

Gene ran, screaming for help, to her home, the gate lodge of Thomas Pierson's estate, where her father is employed as gatekeeper. She quickly told her mother and other brother, Arthur, 11, of the accident, and with them, ran up and down the road, calling for help. Their cries brought Bert B. Walder and his brother, Carlton, who were working nearby.

The Waldens, employing branches of trees, broke Joseph's grasp on the wire, but were too late to save little Billy. Joseph was rushed to the Good Samaritan Hospital in Suffern, a few miles away, so badly burned that surgeons believe he will not recover.

Residents of Sterlington asked State police to fix blame for failure to repair the broken wire, which came down when the tree fell during the storm last Sunday evening.

PROHIBITION DRIVE IN MEXICO REVEALED BY PRESIDENT GIL

of sale for consumption on the premises of liquors of high alcoholic contents which should be sold only in sealed bottles, limitation of sale of liquors to be consumed on the spot to fermented beverages and distilled liquors of low alcoholic contents, prohibition of sale of intoxicating beverages in saloons to women and children, prohibition of sale of food in saloons and regulation of cabarets and dance halls.

The president lists as a further matter to be taken up by the committee the prohibition of manufacture and sale of such distilled liquors as absinthe, gin and whisky. Customs protection and other facilities would be granted to distilleries and breweries transformed to other industrial uses, and scientific studies will be made of how this may be accomplished.

Another project is a customs policy to restrict importation of liquors of high alcoholic content. The police would cooperate in the campaign by publishing statistics on the number of intoxicated persons arrested, and public hospitals would be opened for cure of the drink habit.

The committee will be under the general direction of the public health department, and its expenses will be defrayed from the current national government budget.

The president indicated that he would prohibit the opening of new cabarets and dance halls, so that their number would be decreased when from time to time some of them give up their licenses. The same method has already been applied to saloons in the federal district and some other parts of the republic.

President Portes Gil has said that temperance can best be attained by accustoming people to the changed conditions little by little. He does not stipulate the number of years before his plan becomes fully effective, but it was generally believed that it would take at least from five to ten years to realize the complete program.

Gov. Byrd Inspects Mt. Vernon Estate

Heads Board of Visitors on Annual Visit; Is Guest in Alexandria.

Gov. Harry Flood Byrd, accompanied by members of the Mount Vernon board of visitors, paid his annual visit of inspection yesterday. The party reached Alexandria at noon and was met at the station by Mayor William Albert Smoot and Mrs. Smoot, the mayor being a member of the board of visitors.

After the inspection and the placing of a wreath on the tomb of Washington by the governor he and the other members of the board were entertained at luncheon in the Mount Vernon mansion by the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association, which is now in annual session there. At the conclusion of the luncheon the governor delivered a short address.

Oscar Hammerstein Marries in Baltimore

Baltimore, May 14 (A.P.).—Mrs. Dorothy Blanchard Jacobson, of Melbourne, Australia, and London, and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, poet and playwright, were married in the bridal suite of the Belvedere Hotel today by the Rev. William A. Melvin, of the Lowe Memorial Protestant Church. They will sail from New York Friday night for a European honeymoon, returning early in the summer to attend rehearsals of Mr. Hammerstein's latest production, "Just the Other Day."

The male members of the wedding party were classmates of the bridegroom at Columbia University and later his "buddies" in the World War. Their wives attended the bride, who is a native of Australia and is the daughter of Capt. Henry Blanchard, of Melbourne. Miss Jill Williams, of London, a childhood chum, also attended the bride.

A clear skin is irresistible

. . . in fact, popularity depends upon it

THAT priceless treasure—a clear, flawless, lovely skin—charms, with admiration, the hearts of men.

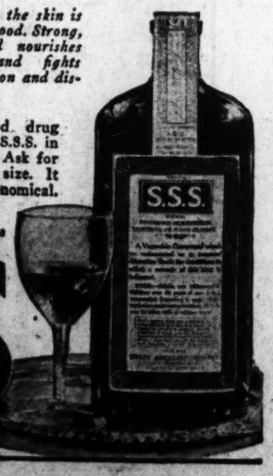
First impressions cannot be good without a clear skin—first impressions are quickly made and are not soon forgotten. Old friends may excuse pimples and secretly sympathize but new acquaintances may not be so charitable. Skin blemishes are not inviting. Neither can they be covered up. They embarrass. Hold people back. Steal away joy and happiness.

A lovely—clear skin—is within the reach of all. To those who have lost it, hope is offered. You, too, may have a beautiful skin, rose-petal in texture, pretty as a picture and without a single pimple.

Many thousands have regained their strength and charm by taking S.S.S. It is Nature's own blood tonic for raising the body's power of resistance to disease, improving the appetite, building firm flesh, and clearing the skin. S.S.S. promotes constructive metabolism (healthy body building). It increases the number of red-blood cells.

The way to the skin is through the blood. Strong, healthy blood nourishes the body and fights against infection and disease.

All good drug stores sell S.S.S. in two sizes. Ask for the larger size. It is more economical.



S.S.S. is made from fresh vegetable drugs and has a successful record of over 100 years back of it.

cruited since the present strike began April 15.

Soon after the strike became serious, the companies requested and obtained National Guard protection. A worker's home and his barn, adjoining the plant property, has been burned, and disorders have been frequent.

The National Guard companies tonight still limited their activities to plant and highway patrol, but rumors of impending martial law for the whole town and county were heard.

Leaders Ask About Tents.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 14 (A.P.).—The Tennessee Federation of Labor, in convention here, today sent a telegram to the Secretary of War asking if the use of tents and other military equipment by units of the Tennessee National Guard acting as special deputies at Elizabethton as strike guards had been authorized.

Action was taken on the telegram following an address by Dr. John R. Neal, who declared that under the State constitution troops could be sworn in as State police, but they could not function as a military unit. Dr. Neal declared the use of Government-owned machine guns and other military equipment was unlawful.

Lehman Dislikes Policy, Quits.

New York, May 14 (A.P.).—The New York Times tomorrow will say it has learned that Col. Herbert H. Lehman, acting governor, resigned on April 18 as director of the American Glanzstoff Corporation and the American Bamberg Corporation of Elizabethton, Tenn., rayon and artificial silk manufacturers, because he did not approve of the handling of the strike of employes "by force or show of force."

Col. Lehman, the Times will say, made several attempts to have the corporations headed by Dr. Arthur Mothruff adjust their grievances with their employes in a peaceful way. Failing, Col. Lehman offered his resignation, which was accepted.

Mother of champions

..California has given more than her share of national and international champions to the world of sport...

MORE and more the question is being asked, "What is the secret of the West's supremacy in sports"? During the past year California has given a national women's tennis champion who is English Champion as well—and three others ranked among the first ten women players. The Olympic Crew Champions—a California Crew—won from the finest crews in the world. The Championship Intercollegiate Track and Field Team, (western teams have won six out of the last seven national championships in track and field events), an intercollegiate golf champion, Olympic swimmers, track and field stars, three football teams that defeated strong eastern opponents, and a team of boys, 16 years and under, which won the national championship in the American Legion's 1928 Junior Baseball Tournament, are part of California's record during 1928.

The answer is an all-year outdoor climate that woos this western world to exercise and everyday recreation. It builds strong bodies and keen minds. What more can you ask of a vacation and a homeland? Come this summer and come by way of

THE RETURN OF OLD KING BRADY

Revived by MERLE W. HERSEY.

(Copyright protected. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

A DARK CASE ON SAN JUAN HILL.

In the third chapter Julius escorts Alice to the home of Celia Renaud, where she agrees to pass as Celia's sister, and visit Mme. Gomier, a fortune teller. Celia goes to a voodoo seance with Alice disguised as a black man. The disguise is discovered by the Voodoo Queen.

CHAPTER IV.

OLD KING BRADY CONDEMNED TO DEATH.

Old and Young King Brady listened to the conversation of Lee and the negress, who had just announced that she was the Voodoo Queen.

Harry peered over the bannisters to see what was going on. It was a comical sight—two big colored men on their knees before the woman, who stood with folded arms, looking down at them contemptuously. Lee, razor in hand, stood grinning at one side.

"Get up and go about your business," ordered the woman in French, and the two promptly got up and sneaked out.

Turning to Lee, the Voodoo Queen demanded, "Why did they come here? They must be Mendies' murderers."

"It might be," returned Lee. "But le's get out of hyah."

"It is my unlucky night," said the woman. "We will go now, but we will return."

They at once left the house.

"Shadow them, Harry," ordered the old detective. "I'll stay a while and look for these papers. You needn't come back as I shall go directly home."

Harry promptly left. After a thorough search through the old house the detective found nothing, so he went home.

Old King Brady was anxious to see the house in daylight. He could not figure out why Mendies had appointed it as a meeting place and he resolved to come back.

Reaching the house the next day Old King Brady paused to observe its surroundings. Opposite were two modern tenements separated by a brick stable which had a "to let" sign on the door. On each side of the house itself was a factory. The stable across the way gave him an idea. Entering the deserted house he sought the cellar. The stairs were broken and the inclosure filled with boxes and barrels, all empty. He got out his flashlight and proceeded to study the situation.

An immediate discovery was the result. The floor was uncemented and a distinct path led to one corner. The old detective proceeded to clear away the boxes from that corner. Sure enough, as he had suspected, there was a wooden door set in a brick arch.

"Now business begins," muttered the old detective. 'Mendies' motive is what I want to get at, and it occurs to me that I am in a fair way to do it." He got out his skeleton keys and soon had the door open. Before him was an arched passage leading under the street in the direction of the stable opposite.

"Probably the storage vaults of the old brewery are still under the stable." He pushed on to another door, and again used his skeleton keys. As he had supposed, here was an extensive subcellar with stone walls and cemented floor. Over at one end were several big vats. Against the wall was a long rack which supported as many as 50 rifles. On a table lay a drum. There were also several Haitian flags on poles. Twenty cases filled with new modern rifles were piled up.

Having examined this strange armory to his satisfaction, he turned to depart. There came the sound of voices in the passage and he quickly dodged in behind one of the big vats. Three men entered, talking excitedly in French. Old King Brady could see they were colored men, well dressed, and he decided they were Haitians.

Just then Old King Brady made another discovery—the place he had chosen to hide in was a sort of dressing room and many uniforms were hanging around on pegs.

Old King Brady Sneezes.

For fully two minutes he managed to stave off the sneeze, when he had been seized with the overpowering desire, but at last the explosion came. Instant silence followed.

The old detective decided to go slow. He stepped out into full view of the three men. At the same moment the door was flung open and in walked a tall, distinguished looking individual. He had straight black hair, a brown complexion and a large nose, curved like a hawk's beak. He spoke rapidly in French to the three men, then turned to the old detective. "Who are you? How came you here?" he asked, in English.

Old King Brady explained. Then a consultation of considerable length took place, after which the stranger addressed the old detective again. "What is your name?" he asked.

"Brady, sir," was the reply.

The man looked startled. Not the famous Old King Brady?' he asked.

"Yes. You have heard of me?"

"Who has not? I hesitate about disposing of a detective of such prominence as yourself." He turned and spoke to his companions again. This time the talk was a little longer. But the stranger turned to Old King Brady and said, "It is no use. It has been decided that you must die."

Harry Strikes a New Mystery.

Harry expected to find Old King Brady home ahead of him, but he did not come home that night, much to Harry's discomfort, for, not knowing where his chief had gone he did not know where to look for him.

The next day passed and nothing was seen or heard of him. It seemed likely the old detective had gotten into serious trouble.

Harry decided to call on Alice. They had an earnest talk.

"It must be this San Juan Hill business for he had nothing else of any importance on hand. What ought we to do?" asked Harry, anxiously.

"Keep right ahead with our plans," said Alice.

"Then you mean to keep your engagement with the Renaud woman?" Harry asked.

"I do," replied Alice. "I see no reason for not going. Rest assured Mr. Brady will turn up all right."

"I propose to take Julius along and shadow you," said Harry.

"Such is your privilege, but I do not consider it at all necessary."

Alice proceeded to make up for the evening, as a light mulatto man. "I'm going now," she announced and bade Harry good-by without further words.

Harry made himself up like a colored man and then went to tell Julius what was in the wind. "Hurry up with the supper," he said, "You and I are going on the warpath up at San Juan Hill again."

They were ready to start at 6:30 Harry wanted to pay a visit to the deserted house before going to Mme. Gomier's.

Reaching the house they went around to the rear, to find that it was dark and deserted. But in a moment they heard heavy footsteps on the cellar stairs. The door opened and out stepped a big negro, carrying a lantern. Raising this, so that the light fell on Young King Brady's face, he said, in French:

"Good evening, Brother Berard!"

He responded, of course.

The darky continued, "The general will be here at midnight to give out our orders."

"What's the news?" asked Harry boldly.

"News? I wasn't here yesterday. Some of the boys say the general captured a detective last night in the armory, spying around."

"What did they do with him?"

"Took him away. Understand they intend to kill him. Better be around at midnight and get your orders."

He returned to the cellar and Harry joined Julius and they proceeded to Mme. Gomier's. They waited around but nothing happened, as we already know. Mme. Gomier had postponed her seance to the following day.

Julius and Harry decided to go back to the deserted house at midnight. Julius to wait around outside while Harry went in. They strolled down the avenue as far as Fiftieth street and then came back up the other side. As they crossed Fifty-ninth street a tall, foreign looking colored man, suddenly stopped and addressed him in French, "Good evening, Brother Berard! This is well met. Where were you last night?"

Harry was equal to the occasion, "I found it impossible to come last night, general," he answered in French.

"It is too bad. Bad luck has come to me. The boy has been kidnaped," the general informed him. "Either that Gomier woman has hired men to steal him for the reward she expects to get, or Rollman's detectives have got him."

"How did it happen?"

"He was playing on the sidewalk in front of the house the last that was seen of him. And tomorrow we sail! He would have been on his way to Port-au-Prince."

"Can I help, general? Why not get a good detective on your own account?"

"I never thought of that!" he exclaimed. "Do you know, heaven has sent me that very thing. The best detective in America is a prisoner on board my ship. He came spying around the armory last night. I did not like to kill so prominent a man so we drugged him and put him on board the ship intending to set him free in Haiti, where he couldn't harm us."

"Better set him free and put this case in his hands, general," suggested Harry.

"I'll think it over," he said as he hurried away.

Another chapter in this serial masterpiece is in tomorrow's paper. Don't miss it! Old King Brady is deep in the mystery of San Juan Hill.

YOUR BOY and YOUR GIRL

By ARTHUR DEAN, SC.D., The Parent Counselor

A Damsel in Distress.

NO more interesting letters reach this department than those from boys and girls on the threshold of life—the plunge into the world to achieve distinction and advancement. Dreams, ambitions, urges surge and flow through their lively letters. Youth—splendid, vital, purple! And yet how almost tragically in need of guidance.

The following young person comes to us:

"I belong to the public and a stage career. I have talent and if I don't think so nobody else will, certainly. God has given me a voice which, properly trained, could thrill thousands. I am not exactly good looking, but people have turned to take a second look. I am not conceited; I am just looking myself impersonally in the face.

"I love the part of a comedienne. And here I am plugging away at a typewriter and taking dictation when I would much rather be reading the write-ups about me while my voice held the audience spellbround or my dancing carried the world to my feet.

* * * Nobody can tell me that pull doesn't mean anything! How shall I start?"

Fine ambition, involving, perhaps, the hardest, most disagreeable and most discouraging work in the wide world. Yes, my dear, just shake off that cold water I have dashed at you and smile.

You must either start at the bottom and work up without going to a special school or go to a school and, after graduation, start from the bottom. In either case you will start at the same place. Opinions differ as to which is the quicker and wiser method.

The first course means taking the first chance you get to sing, dance or act. Pull may get the opportunity, but push will keep it. There isn't a door marked pull which doesn't have a push on the other side.

The second method requires that you select a school. After you have done the selecting you will find the school will do a little selecting on its own account. The better the school the less it will encourage you. The more it wants your money the more it will tell you how wonderful you are.

The Theater Guild School and the American Laboratory Theater in New York City might admit you. There are schools of collegiate grade at Harvard and Yale. The Emerson School of Oratory is in Boston. The Curtis School of Music is in Philadelphia—to mention a few in the East. Then there's the long and hard row afterward for those "who belong," as you say, "to the public." But the public, unfortunately, doesn't always claim its property.

I recommend first that you have singing tests made by a real teacher. This will involve a number of points which you probably little suspect including an examination of your throat, tongue, the formation of the roof of your mouth, your lungs and health history—then your voice. If you pass these tests a qualified dramatic teacher can give you well-worth-paying-for criticism on your personality, mental attainments and stage possibilities. If you pass these hurdles successfully you can approach the rest with considerable self-assurance. If you don't—well, you will have approached your problem scientifically and learned quickly and at comparatively small expense what might have cost years of trial. Here's to you.

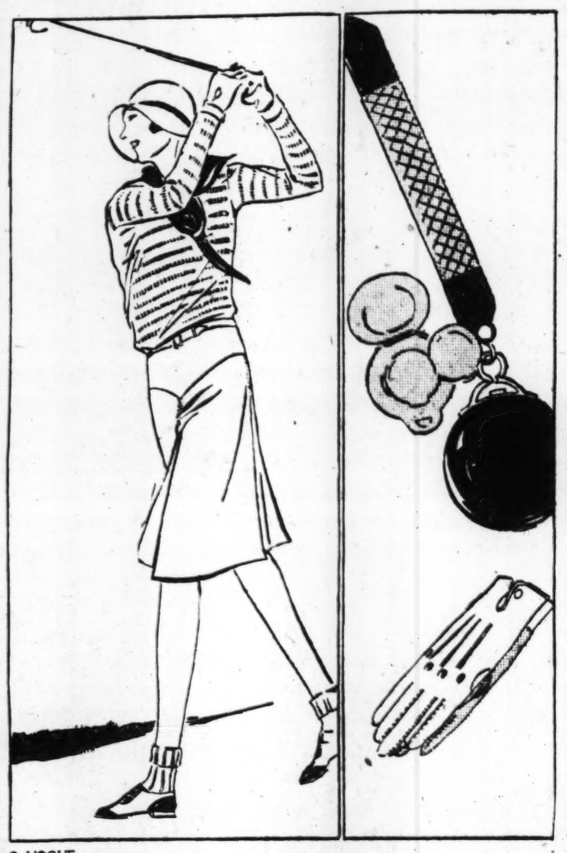
Notes From the Golf Course



© VOGUE

This skirt for the golfer achieves its necessary fulness through well-placed inverted pleats. The sports watch, designed in Paris, has a braided leather fob, weatherproof metal case, and slips on a hinge out of its case for winding. Below it are regulation golf gloves of chamois, reinforced on the palms with capeskin.

SUITABILITY and comfort are the first requisites in golf clothes, and without them no golfer can be chic.

Neutral colors are best on the green. No one should wish to appear like a flag on the golf links.

Tweeds are new in black-and-white or yellow-and-blue mixtures; greens in combination are smart, and beige continues to be a classic. Checks are the smartest of patterns.

The double sweater costume with a pull-on sweater and one of coat type to match is effective in soft-colored angora weaves.

Skirts, slightly circular, wrapped around or deeply pleated, are the most practical.

The tuck-in blouse having returned to favor, jerseys also are occasionally tucked into skirts.

Hats do not depart from their classically simple lines for sports, but may have lower crowns and slightly wider brims. A few felts have been seen with printed checked patterns. The beret and turban are extreme, but look smart on some golfers.

Crepe scarfs most properly tie like cravats and have a masculine severity. In any event a scarf on the golf links is always securely pinned in place.

Sunburn-colored lisle and fine woolen stockings are correct. Short woolen socks in plain colors add comfort.

Brown-and-white golf shoes are the most popular of all types of footwear. Black-and-white shoes are worn with black-and-white tweeds or accessories. Well-cut versions of the gillie shoe, the classic Oxford and the Peal laced shoe are all advocated by good players.

Gloves continue perforated and fingerless, with the clasp on the outside of the wrist. Chamois reinforced with capeskin is the most popular combination.

Uncle Ray's Corner

Famous Volcanoes.

II. MOUNT PELEE

IN THE West Indies is an island known as Martinique, and it has long been a colony of France. Its chief city is called Fort-de-France.

There was a time when quite a different city held first rank on the island. That city was known as St. Pierre. Its misfortune was that it lay alongside a volcano.

Terrible smoke cloud of Mt. Pelee.

In 1902 the people of St. Pierre were following their tasks and purposes, little thinking what harm might come to them from Mount Pelee. Some of them knew that the volcano had been active in times past, but there had been no eruption for 50 years.

Then came a black day. Smoke rose from the crater, fire-laden smoke. It rose until it formed a vast cloud, more than a mile high.

This cloud was a heavy one, for it was charged with millions of tiny bits of red-hot lava stone. It began rolling down the mountain side, toward St. Pierre.

In the cloud, besides steam and the fiery bits of lava, was poisonous gas. Little did the people of St. Pierre know what a dreadful danger confronted them.

Downward swept the cloud. It reached the edge of the city, and passed over the houses. People breathed the gas and fell dead. Others hid in their houses, but the houses caught fire and burned.

It was a time of the utmost terror—terror and death. In a little while the city of St. Pierre had been destroyed, and 30,000 men, women and children had been killed!

There was no flow of lava during the eruption, but the fiery cloud and the ashes were enough. Ships in the harbor of St. Pierre were set fire. Ashes poured over an area of hundreds of square miles.

So, once more, Nature showed mankind that not all is safe in this world. Volcanoes will burst, tornadoes will sweep, floods will drown. Yet mankind has done much to master Nature. I doubt that we shall ever be able to stop explosions of volcanoes, but we shall probably learn to keep them from harming us.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

The Banker.

Time was the banker old and gray
Drove all the customers away.
When anybody asked a loan
His voice assumed an icy tone;
His eye took on a stony glare
His body shivered in his chair,
And like a preacher he began
To terrify the business man.
His motto was: The fool who lends
Loses his money and his friends.

Excuses were his stock in trade.
He knew why loans should not be made.
He knew just how to shake his head
To everything a borrower said;
Sad was the look which he could show
As he pronounced the final "no."
And sad his sigh as he declined
To take a risk of any kind,
That though his gains did not increase,
He lived a life of perfect peace.

Today the banker thinks it wise
The bank he serves to advertise;
Gone is that practiced icy stare
And gone the frown which cried "beware!"
That "keep out" sign of brass or tin
In glittering words now reads "come in."
Instead of frowning all the while,
The banker's learning how to smile.
And what is more, I think he's learned
That dividends by loans are earned.

WOL Denies Refusing Use Of Its Radio

Says Ten Mile Square Club Did Not Apply to Broadcast Suffrage for District—W2XAG Allowed 200,000 Watts.

A vigorous denial has been made to Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, by LeRoy Mark that Grover W. Ayers, executive secretary of the Ten Mile Square Club, has been denied the use of radio to broadcast their position over the air in relation to suffrage in the District of Columbia through station WOL, of which Mr. Mark is president.

"Station WOL wishes in its own behalf to deny this accusation as we have never been approached by this organization nor Mr. Ayers, whose club or individual name we can not find either in the telephone or city directory.

"Should the subject matter of a talk that he desires to broadcast be of public interest and necessity we would be most happy to donate any reasonable time for such a discussion, if requested to do so by this or any other reputable organization at any time. This station is in full and complete operation and has been since 1924 and has never refused anybody the privilege of broadcasting a thing of this character."

The General Electric Company's station, W2XAG at Schenectady, N. Y., has received an experimental license from the Federal Radio Commission to use 200,000 watts for three months, from midnight to morning on 550, 660, 790 1,150 and 1,500 kilocycles. Chairman Robinson dissented from the decision.

When the New Yorker Hotel, which aims to be New York's largest and tallest hotel, opens in December, the entire 2,500 rooms will be equipped with the very latest in radio receiving sets. It will not only be possible for the guests to tune in on the hotel orchestra playing from the grill, but an attachment will enable them to get the music direct from the grill.

Popular songs in special arrangement for xylophone solos will be broadcast by Sam Herman, wizard of the wooden bars with piano accompaniment, over WRC next Sunday evening at 10:15 o'clock.

The Federal Radio Commission reckoned without the rest of the world when they made the reallocation of wavelengths last November.

Station WBBM, Chicago, which is on a cleared channel, finds itself heterodyned by a Japanese station on the same frequency of 770 kilocycles. Very little of this is experienced in the Central and Eastern parts of the United States, but many foreign fans are having their WBBM signals heterodyned.

A letter just received from a listener, K. L. Williams, Arcoona station, South Australia, says, "The reception of distant stations is improving with the approach of our winter and I heard you once again. Just as your station was coming in with good loudspeaker strength, station JOAK, in Japan, came on the same wave length, heterodyning, and making further reception impossible."

It is almost impossible for radio announcers to get away from their admirers, even when they are off the air. Kenneth Fickett, NBC announcer, went into a restaurant and ordered a baked apple.

"I know you," said the waitress. "I recognize your voice. You are Kenneth Fickett. I heard you on the radio."

Two days later Fickett received a package containing a dozen apples.

"I know you like apples," the letter that accompanied them said. "I overheard you ordering a baked one. Remember? The waitress recognized your voice."

Station WBAL, Baltimore, has booked the City Park Band and the Municipal Band, two of the city's leading musical organizations, for band concerts again this summer. This makes the third season the station has provided listeners with a regular series of band programs and, as formerly, these broadcasts will be presented weekly, coming on the air this year on Tuesday nights from 8 to 9 o'clock. The Municipal Band will appear one week and the City Park Band the following week.

Baltimore is one of the pioneers in the exploitation of municipal music, having been the first city in the United States to create a municipal department of music, which has been conducted throughout the twelve years of its existence by Frederick R. Huber, who is also the director of Station WBAL. These band concerts will be brpadcast from the music pavilion in Patterson Park, where a permanent hook-up has been installed.

"It's easy to see why some girls keep their own names after marriage—it makes it easier for their friends to keep track of the changes."

Jane Interprets the Mode

"Noisette," a smart afternoon ensemble. The coat, of light brown woolen fabric, has white pique collar and cuffs, and is interestingly stitched. The dress is a crepe de chine in a matching shade, with self incrustations and white trimming (Courtesy of the Maison Lenief, Paris.)

FOR smart evening wear the gold or silver slipper of kid has become a standard article of miladi's apparel—for which reason it was quite natural that the Parisian designers should go seeking the fresh and the novel.

One of the latest and most favored of these developments we have seen is the spangled slipper, trimmed elaborately in paillettes.

These paillettes may be of gold or silver, following tradition, or for an effect still more fetching they are trimmed in paillettes matching in color, size and shape those used to embroider the accompanying evening gown. The effect of this is really delightful.

In the case of opera pumps, buckles this season have achieved a beauty rarely seen before, because these ornaments, which up to now have inclined to be a bit mediocre in design, have suddenly "gone modern" with a vengeance, and have come out in a wide variety of goemetric shapes, simple and complex, in angular areas of gold, silver and semiprecious stones.

And lastly, we must signal the appearance of shoe buttons in the form of tiny roses, in gold, silver and other metals. Metal heels also will show floral motifs, usually inset with colored brilliants.

Fashion/French.

Chaussure (sho-soor)—shoe.
Chemise (sheh-meez)—shirt, chemise, smock.
Cheveu (sheh-veu)—hair.
Chevriot (sheh-vee-ote)—tweed.
Chevre (shevre)—goat.

S'posin' you didn't have any further use for a sleeveless party type of frock after graduation? Or at least precious little use, too little for the amount of money you had to put into this dress for this occasion.

Well, s'posin' we came along and told you how to make a perfectly lovely sleeveless graduation frock in the very latest mode—and then on top of that a cunning jacquette to go with it, which would make it an afternoon dress that you could wear on ever so many occasions?

Wouldn't you just sit right down and get your stamped self-addressed envelope ready to send to the Dare department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet that would tell you how to make it? Well, sit down and do it, because that's just exactly what is waiting for you this week.

New Tulles Favored.

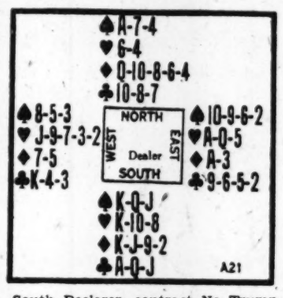
The new, wide mesh, honeycombed tulles continue to be favored both because they are much more durable than the ordinary tulle, and because they are lovely. Tulle, more than any other material, enhances the youthful figure and flatters the less youthful one. But plump figures must beware of it.

The Fashion Letter contains much to interest many. Read it.

Au revoir.

WORK ON BRIDGE

Another of the "Misplayed Hands I Have Met."



South Declarer, contract No Trump. West led the Tray of Hearts. East won with the Ace and returned the Queen: Declarer holding up his King to exhaust East of Hearts if the adverse division should be dangerous 5-3. When the Queen won, East led Hearts a third time and South took the trick.

Declarer then led Diamonds and when East won with the Ace he led Clubs up to Dummy's weakness, hoping to put West in the lead so he could run his Hearts. Declarer declined the finesse and, winning with the Ace, led out the Diamonds, discarding one Club on Dummy's last Diamond, and made three Spades, one Heart, four Diamonds and one Club—a total of nine tricks and game.

Was the hand played correctly?

THE CORRECT PLAY

West's fourth best lead of the Trey of Hearts, with the Four in Dummy, showed East that West had held not more than five Hearts, so that South must have at least three. If West's lead was from the King, East's Queen would win the trick as well as the Ace; but if South had the King, East could not capture it, South having at least two other Hearts with it. Consequently East should play the Queen, hoping to induce South to win the trick. This South would be apt to do because, as far as he could tell, the lead was from the Ace-Jack and his only chance to win with the King would be on the first trick.

If East plays the Heart Queen on the first trick, South's King will win and Declarer surely will lead Diamonds in view of the Diamonds showing in dummy. Then it becomes a simple matter for East to win with the Diamond Ace and lead out his Ace and Five of Hearts, and East and West will win five tricks and save game.

Of course if South did not win the Queen of Hearts but held his King until the third round, he would make his game. That, however, would be a play that would be possible only for a Declarer who knew the location of all the cards.

What Today Means to You

May 15.

By MARY BLAKE.

"TAURUS."

IF May 15 is your birthday, the best hours for you today are from 6 a. m. to 8 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3:30 p. m., and from 8 p. m. to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. and from 5 p. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Decision and concentration are vitally essential today to those who are engaged in legal and business transactions as unusual opportunities will be presented in camouflaged attire.

The child born today will have a fiery, impetuous nature and will crave activity and excitement. It will be extremely fond of music, which will be its one decided talent. It will be led by its emotions, rather than by its reason.

You have a very magnanimous nature, and this characteristic is exhibited in the various phases of your life. Your unselfishness is almost a fault, as in your anxiety to share and give, you are at times unfair to yourself, and many of your blessings are thrown away on ungrateful and unworthy recipients. There is an art in giving. In your relations with others, you are very tolerant and disinterested in your views. You are slow to condemn and quick to commend.

You quickly sense a wrong or injury, but are always anxious to forgive and forget. Your hand is seldom withheld. At heart you are a sincere pacifist, and you take considerable pains to keep peace. You will not tolerate inharmonious surroundings.

While you will be rewarded for your honesty, perseverance and ability, your successes, from selfish and worldly standpoints will not reach the peak that they would if you were not always willing to step aside and play second fiddle. "Our acts our angels are," and your compensation will come from feeling that you have cheated none, have deceived none and have hurt none. Regret and remorse will seldom darken your life. A comfortable existence, a contented mind and a legion of friends will be the greatest gifts that life will bestow upon you.

Successful people born May 15:
Levi Lincoln, stateman.
Jacob Thompson, politician.
Thomas Lake Harris, spiritualist.
William P. M. Fleming, astronomer.

10 PER CENT FUNDS FAIL TO HALT RALLY

Vigorous Pool Buying in Few Issues Helps Entire Stock List Upward.

COPPERS FIRM UP LATE

New York, May 14 (A.P.).—To the consternation of rule-of-the-thumb traders, the stock market went up with the call money rate today, although its perversity in selling off yesterday with money the cheapest in more than a month, had in a measure prepared them for today's demonstration.

The ease in money which appeared on Friday was short lived, with the rate again renewing at 7 per cent today, but mounting to 8 soon afternoon, then shortly to 10. Prices fluctuated uncertainly until after the 10 per cent rate had been posted, when vigorous pool operations in a few issues led the entire list upward. Trading, however, was in moderate volume, with the day's turnover reaching but 3,634,300 shares, about 1,000,000 less than yesterday's.

Leaders in the late rally were General Electric and Packard, soaring 15 and 16 points, respectively, the former to a record price at 277. The buying of General Electric was based on unconfirmed rumors of a forthcoming 4-for-1 split-up, or distribution of its holdings of Radio as a stock dividend. Packard was seen soaring by a report that its new Diesel aviation motor had flown 700 miles on less than $5 worth of fuel oil, and by announcement of record breaking April sales of cars.

Time Money at 7 Per cent.

The credit situation was not without a dampening effect upon market enthusiasm, as was evident from the pace of trading. Time money was at 9 per cent for even 90-day funds, and rumors of a possible rise in the New York rediscount rate this week was given color by the jacking up of the Minneapolis Bank's rate to 5 per cent, leaving only San Francisco on a 4½ per cent basis. Wall street generally, however, was inclined to believe that an increase would be postponed a little longer.

Now that the spring credit requirements are largely out of the way, however, several bankers believe that the New York rate might be put up to 6 per cent, and held there until fall without any severe burden upon business.

The day's news was largely favorable. The condition statement of weekly reporting Federal Reserve member banks, showing a reduction of $130,000,000 in loans on securities, was particularly pleasing, as contrasting with the recent upturn in brokers' loans. President Simmons' defense of brokers' loans in his annual report to the stock exchange also tended to restore confidence. Steel mill operations were reported to have been stepped up again in the past week, with U. S. Steel once more operating above its rated capacity.

Ascribed to Short Covering.

Much of the upturn was ascribed to short covering, particularly in Radio, which sagged to 92, then rebounded to 96⅞, a net gain of 2⅞. General Motors, after mounting about 2 points to 82¼, fell back to 80, met strong resistance at that point, finally sagged to 79⅝, only to rebound to 81⅝.

Utilities made substantial headway, led by Commonwealth Power, which rose nearly 7 points to a new peak at 163¼. A split-up is said to be impending in this issue.

Coppers were under pressure for a time, but firmed up in the late trading. Granby was a strong spot, mounting more than 6 points.

Missouri Pacific was the leader of the rails, selling up about 6 points to a new top.

Westinghouse was strong in sympathy with General Electric, advancing about 8 points to a new peak. Ludlum responded to a good earnings statement. Such shares as American Can, Allied Chemical, By-Products Coke, Consolidated Gas, Chrysler, Goodyear, United Aircraft and Wright Aero climbed from about 2 to 5 points.

Few Soft Spots Appear.

Soft spots were Baldwin Locomotive and International Paper, tumbling about 9 points each. Chile Copper, Burroughs and National Lead were among issues losing 2 points or so.

In the commodity markets grains again acted better, with wheat selling up about a cent a bushel on rumors of Russian buying and reports of floods in Kansas. Corn mounted 1 to 2 cents on delay in planting in the Central West and better foreign markets. Cotton, however, lost about $1 a bale on better weather.

Foreign exchanges were inclined to ease, with sterling cables dropping to $4.85⅛, near the gold point and the lowest since the Bank of England raised its discount rate. French and German exchange, however, were firm.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, May 14 (A.P.).—The action of today's cotton market seemed to be dominated by the better weather prospects in the South and the failure of bullish features in the spot situation or statistical position to create a more aggressive demand. July contracts sold off from 18.82 to 18.45 under liquidation or reselling by recent buyers, but recovered part of the loss, closing at 18.56, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 17 to 24 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 7 points to a decline of 6 points. Old crop months were relatively firm on further covering by trade or speculative shorts accompanied by reiterated reports of a firm spot situation in the South. July led the advance in these positions, selling up to 18.82 during the first few minutes, or 7 points net higher and about 10 points over the price of the new October contract. Selling of new crop months against purchases of the old contributed to the decline in the later positions, and the market developed no decided trend until after publication of the census report on supply and distribution for the month of April. This showed domestic consumption of 631,710 bales from April, compared with 632,608 for March and 524,765 for April last year. The figures were within a few thousand bales of recent forecasts and had evidently been discounted as they failed to stimulate demand. Perhaps this accounted for some of the selling which followed, but which was more generally attributed to the favorable weather forecasts which pointed to clear or partly cloudy weather over nearly the entire belt with higher temperatures in the Southwest.

Brokers with Wall street and Western connections were among the more prominent sellers on the decline, but for a time the selling was more or less general, and part of it was supposed to reflect a bearish view of commodity values generally. May broke to 19.25, while December sold off to 18.60, making net declines of 30 to 34 points on the active months. Some stop orders were uncovered on a scale down, and after their execution the market steadied on covering which became more active late in the afternoon following reports of overflows in sections of Arkansas, where there have been heavy rains of late.

Last prices showed rallies of about 7 to 13 points from the lowest.

Liverpool was relatively firm on Bombay and continental buying early, but reacted before the local opening. Exports today, 8,785, making 7,681,622 so far this season. Port receipts, 5,746. United States port stocks, 1,244,199.

CONVERTIBLE BONDS STAGE LATE RALLY

General List Shades Off Irregularly as Call Money Stiffens.

FOREIGN LOANS UNEVEN

New York, May 14 (A.P.).—A late comeback staged by convertibles in sympathy with stocks provided the bond market with some action today. In face of the selling that continued through the early part of the session in stocks and stock feature bonds and persistence of high money rates, with call money jumping from 7 to 10 per cent, the standard investment issues held their ground fairly well. As a whole the market shaded off into irregularity, particularly in the widely fluctuating stock privilege issues.

The firmest tone of the money market was reflected in the United States Government list which turned soft after pointing higher in the last few days.

The rally enabled American I. G. Chemical 5½s and a few other stock feature issues to make up their early losses but most of the group closed a little lower. The leader of the convertibles was the recently listed issue of Missouri Pacific 5½s. As the stock advanced, traders bought the bonds in large numbers and they moved into new high ground above 103, finishing at that figure for a 1½-point gain on the heaviest turnover in the list. Atchison Convertible 4½s also were in demand and finished fractionally higher.

Anaconda Copper 7s, an old leader of the stock feature group, tumbled 10 points on sale of six bonds. Most of them have been converted and the issue has become inactive. Another erstwhile leader of the convertibles, Public Service of New Jersey 4½s, dropped 7 points on the general selling movement.

The early decline in stocks brought high grade industrial bonds into favor. Bethlehem Steel Issues, Anaconda Copper 6s, and American Smelting 5s moved up fractionally. Rubbers also were higher. The sugar group continued weak. Hoe & Co. 6½s, with the improved earnings prospects of the company, jumped nearly 6 points.

The rail mortgages were neglected. The recently listed Texas & Pacific C 5s steadied up around 97⅜ in face of fair demand. Speculative activity in Seaboard Airline Adjustment 5s again was pronounced. After touching a new high at 51 they finished unchanged at 50 on sales of 221 bonds.

The foreign list was uneven. British Kingdom 5s sold at more than a point while French governments were firm. German Republic 7s held steady at a fraction above their low price of the year. Brazilian issues, which also are near their year's lows, again turned easy.

Hagen Shoots Record 69 to Lead Pros

Sets Course Mark Despite Elements in English Tourney.

Watrous 2d; Diegel Ties for 3d; Lone Yank Above 75.

MOORTOWN, England, May 14 (U.P.).—With members of the American Ryder Cup Team leading the field at the end of the first eighteen holes of qualifying play, the invading troupe of professional golfers today were confident of victory in the Yorkshire Evening News $5,000 professionnal tournament.

Walter Hagen, whose spectacular victory in the recent British open tournament at Muirfield has made him one of the most feared of golfers, led the field at the end of the first eighteen holes with a record breaking 69, 2 under par for the Moortown course.

Al Watrous, another American, was in second place, one stroke behind, while Leo Diegel, American P. G. A. champion, was tied with Archie Compston and Abe Mitchell, of Great Britain, for third at 71 each.

Hagen's 69, which set a new course record for medal play, was all the more remarkable because he gained it in the face of unfavorable weather. He played the second nine holes in a cold rain, with a stiff breeze blowing over the course.

Diegel and Watrous shot steady golf, the former shooting a 35 on both nine holes, while the latter lost a stroke at the eighteenth, forcing him to accept a 36 for the last nine after he had tied Watrous on the outgoing round.

Johnny Golden Picks Up Ball After Long Shots Go Astray.

All of the American pros finishd in 75 or under for the first 18 holes, with the exception of Johnny Golden, who picked up after losing control of his long shots and pounding the ball out of bounds five times.

All of the Americans should qualify, the experts agree, the general opinion being that two rounds of 75 will be good enough to place any contestant in the match play round which starts Thursday.

The low 32 in the 36-hole qualifying round will be paired for the match play and two 18-hole matches will be played on Thursday and Friday, the surviving two meeting in a 36-hole final match Saturday.

Hagen's score today was believed low enough to assure him of the $100 prize offered for the low 18 holes in qualifying play, and he was a favorite for the $150 purse to be awarded the lowest aggregate qualifying score.

The Americans were the guests of the Evening News tonight, attending the American musical comedy, "Good News."

McLarnin Offered Bout With Dundee for Title

Vancouver, British Columbia, May 14 (A.P.).—A match with Joe Dundee for the welterweight championship was offered Jimmy McLarnin today in a telegram received from Jess McMahon, of New York City.

The offer made no proposals for terms or location of the contest. McLarnin and his manager, "Pop" Foster, said they may go to New York to discuss terms with McMahon.

Braves Beat Cubs, 6-5, In 12th; Pound Malone

Boston, May 14 (A.P.).—Doubles by Berney James, a rookie infielder, and Al Spohrer with one out in the twelfth, gave the Braves a 6-to-5 victory over the Cubs here today, and dropped the Chicago visitors into a tie with the Cardinals for the league leadership. It was Pat Malone's first defeat after a run of five victories.

The Braves raked Malone for fourteen safe hits, while the Cubs got six safeties off Ben Cantwell in seven rounds and only three off his successor, Johnny Cooney. Cantwell retired after Heinie Mueller took the pitcher's turn at bat in the seventh, and Cooney held the invaders runless for five more rounds waiting for the Braves to win for him.

George Harper drove in three of the Boston runs and George Sisler two. Three of the six Chicago hits off Cantwell were bunched into the fourth round, and were good for four runs.

Red Sox Beaten, 6-2, By White Sox Rookie

Chicago, May 14 (A.P.).—The White Sox rallied in the late innings today and defeated Boston in the second of the series, 6 to 2.

Bill Cissell broke a 2-to-2 tie in the seventh by hitting a homer into the left field seats with the bases vacant.

The White Sox scored three more in the eighth on a single and double off Jack Russell and a pass and two singles off rescuer Milton Gaston.

Miss Collett Wins Again, 3 and 2

Rallies on Last Three Holes to Score in British Tourney.

Minnesota Girl Wins in Feature of Second Round.

By FRANK H. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer).

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 14 (A.P.).—The best of golfers, men and women, expect one weak round during a tournament, and Glenna Collett had hers today. She defeated Maude Bryant, 3 and 2, in the second round of the British women's championship, a comfortable enough margin, but until the last three holes of the match, when she struck her stride and won them, one after another, the American girl never seemed safe.

Under the ever changing conditions which make the St. Andrews links unique among the golf courses of the world, the American champion's putter failed her completely today. At green after green she failed to get her ball up to the cup. All last night rain fell, and today, instead of the fast greens of yesterday they displayed a varying pace requiring perfection in judgment and touch. Miss Collett took three putts on five greens.

Miss Boothby, Minnesota Girl, Wins Her Match.

Miss Bryant was able to hold her own until the fourteenth, where the visitor began to display the boldness on the greens she displayed with her wooden clubs.

Miss Marion Hollins, former champion of the United States, won her second round match from Miss P. Ramsay, 4 and 3, and Miss Gertrude Boothby, Rochester, Minn., defeated Mrs. J. A. D. Bell, 6 up and 5 to play.

This was the first championship competition here for the little Minnesota girl for she won her first round match by default. She took the American golfing honors of the day by playing a much better game than that shown by either the champion or former champion of her country.

Starting badly with a mixture of fives and sixes for five holes, she then played the series of holes known as "the loop" in one under fours.

This performance equaled that of Miss Joyce Wethered, former champion of British women, who won today from Mrs. D. G. Madill, 8 and 7.

Possible Wethered-Collett Meeting Holds Interest.

Interest continues centered in the possibility of a meeting between Glenna and Joyce in the 36-hole final Friday Usually at the women's championships entrants who are eliminated leave for their home, but this year most of them are staying in the hope of seeing a great match between the two best women players of Great Britain and the United States.

Tomorrow morning Miss Collett meets Miss Beryl Brown of Formby, with the winner playing the winner of the match between Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen of Toronto and Mrs. J. B. Walker of Walton Heath to determine the quarter finalists.

Play tomorrow morning will start with 32 competitors, but tomorrow night there will be only eight. The quarter-finals will be played Thursday morning and the semifinals Thursday afternoon with the final Friday over the long stretch of 36 holes.

Landis Will Question Young Yankee Hurler

Cleveland, May 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Roy Sherid, youngest of the Yankee pitchers, leaves for Chicago tonight to be questioned by Commissioner Landis concerning his baseball connections prior to his signing by the Yanks. Sherid joined the Yanks just about a year ago and last June was farmed to Montreal, winning 15 games and losing 7 for the Royals.

TIGERS LOSE 10-8 GAME TO MACKMEN

Athletics Regain Lead in Slugfest; Rally in Ninth Fails.

DETROIT, May 14 (A.P.).—The Athletics regained the American League pinnacle by defeating the Tigers, 10 to 8, in the second game of the series here today while the Yankees sat idly about their hotel in Cleveland watching the rain. It required the efforts of two of Connie Mack's starting pitchers, Jack Quinn and Bob Grove, and his two best finishers, Bill Shores and Eddie Rommel, to halt the Bengals, who went down with three on base in the ninth when Grove fanned Hargrove and Johnson after permitting Phillips to single and Schuble to walk.

Tigers Outhit Athletics But Fail to Bunch Blows.

The home forces outhit the Macks by 14 to 13, but failed to drive the ball to safety in the pinches. Al Simmons lifted the ball over the left field fence with one on in the third for his fifth home run of the season. Bob Fothergill got a homer in the ninth.

Johnny Prudhomme started for the Tigers, but quit in the fourth after the first five men to face him in that round drove home three runs.

Hopkins Meet Today Draws 3 D. C. Colleges

Three local colleges will be represented in the Johns Hopkins track and field meet at Baltimore today. George Washington, Gallaudet and Catholic University athletes will vie with representatives of Hopkins and Loyola, both of Baltimore. The meet will be staged on Homewood Field.

Catholic University will send a squad of 20 contestants. Fifteen will represent George Washington, and thirteen will compete for Gallaudet.

Hopkins won the meet with ease last year, but Coach Hambleton, of the Blue Jays, made it known that he is expecting the Cardinals to give his charges a more formidable battle this year. Loyola will be competing in the meet for the first time.

JOHNSON OUT WITH TEAM FRIDAY

Recovers Rapidly and Will Resume Management of Nats.

RAPIDLY recovering from a kidney infection which forced him to return home from Cleveland last week, Walter Johnson is expected again to assume command of the Nationals on Friday, when they open a series of seventeen straight games with the Athletics and Yanks, his physicians announced yesterday.

At his home in Alta Vista, near Bethesda, the Nats' pilot has been gradually recovering from the illness since Sunday, when he was dismissed from Emergency Hospital, where he had gone last Tuesday for treatment.

Walter is anxious to get back with the club, although he was high in his praise yesterday of the manner in which his chief assistant, Clyde Milan, has handled the team during his absence. He is confident that the club will hit a stride nearer that predicted at the start of the season when the weather settles and the players show their true form.

The Nationals' boss indicated last night that any changes that might be made in the line-up will depend on what Milan has to report when the club returns from its first swing around the Western circuit.

4-Run Rally With Two Out Halted as Pinch Hitter Fans.

Goslin and Schang Hit Homers; Nats Lead From Start.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 14.—A combination of timely hitting on their part and some good pinch pitching by Adolph Liska gave the Nationals a 9-to-7 victory over the St. Louis Browns here this afternoon, and what made the triumph all the sweeter was the fact that it was registered at the expense of Sammy Gray, who is one of the comparatively few flingers in the league credited with four victories at this early stage of the season.

Gray was not at his best and the Nats were in a particularly vicious hitting mood, for they scored in no less than six frames and wasted very few of their hits. Bluege led the Washington attack with four singles, but Goslin pressed him for honors, getting his fifth homer of the season in the ninth after having singled previously. Wally Schang also broke into the home run class during the afternoon by duplicating the Gooese's stunt in the home half of the same frame. In each case a runner was on the bases.

Liska Managed to Wiggle Out of Trouble Until Ninth.

Liska was in trouble much of the time, but managed to wiggle out until the seventh, when his offerings were knicked for three runs, although this rally netted but two St. Louis hits. In the ninth, however, after two were out, he ran into a peck of trouble and had to be relieved by Marberry, who ended the game by fanning Pinch Hitter Ferrell.

The Nats were in the lead all the while and, despite the closeness of the score, never were seriously threatened in the ninth as they entered the final frame six runs to the good.

Although the Nats tallied two times in the first four frames, while holding the Browns scoreless, it was not until they doubled their total in the fifth that they began to breathe easier, for the Howley team had been a continued threat.

Seven of the home gang had been left on the sacks in the first four rounds and one hit would have proved mighty costly on each of these occasions. Fortunately for Liska, however, he had managed to keep the Browns from starting anything until there were one or two out.

In the opener he walked two with as many out, while one was gone when L. Melillo singled and stole second. Two were defunct in the third when first Manush and then Schulte singled, and then came safeties by Schang and Gray which were wasted in round 4 because two outs had preceded them.

Gooch Returns To Line-Up If Stewart Hurls

Special to The Washington Post.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 14.—The Nats will end their first 1929 Western invasion here tomorrow afternoon, weather permitting, with Garland Braxton, and Walter Stewart listed to stage a southpaw battle. The latter is the only portsider with the St. Louis team. His record to date is one victory in three starts, while Braxton has four victories and no losses to show for his efforts, half of his triumphs having been recorded while filling relief roles.

With Stewart listed to perform tomorrow, Acting Boss Milan plans to use Charlie Gooch at first in place of Capt. Joe Judge and he is particularly anxious to see this youngster at bat. This scheme of benching the veteran first sacker was adopted to reduce the number of left handed hitters against southpaw pitching and it worked to perfection the last time it was tried, Gooch cracking out two singles in as many times up.

A player can not develop his hitting while sitting on the bench and the Nats see great possibilities in Gooch as a hitter. He batted better than .350 while with Little Rock last year and hit to all fields. That he has plenty of courage is indicated by his volunteering to understudy Judge at first—in a position which he never had previously played—when it became necessary to send Harley Boss home from the Tampa training camp because of illness.

Gooch since has developed into a fair first sacker, while he also can play a good game at short or third. Milan believes that the youngster also will come in handy as a pinch hitter and for this reason, wants to give him as much stick action as possible.

VOLTEAR LOOMS AS CHIEF HOPE OF EAST IN DERBY

Mediocre Lot Competed in Maryland

Few 3-Year-Olds From East Likely to Go to Post Saturday.

Clyde Van Dusen and Boris Mentioned as the Winner.

By CHARLES WATSON.

THERE have been many brilliant renewals of the Kentucky Derby since Aristides won the inaugural event in 1875, and in each instance Eastern invaders have played an important part in the running. Many times have these seaboard 3-year-olds brought the trophy and the pot of gold back to Maryland or New York, but this year little is expected of the mediocre crop which has raced over Maryland racing strips during the early spring season.

There will be no Regent, the only filly to win the event, or a George Smith, Omar Khayyam, Sir Barton, Paul Jones, Morvich, Flying Ebony, Zev or Whiskery, not to mention other lesser lights to represent the Eastern racing interests this year.

Seldom has a Derby been so open, and among the 159 colts, fillies and geldings on the eligible list only a comparative few which displayed their speed and stamina on Maryland tracks will be seen in action when the horses are called to the post on Derby day, next Saturday.

History Unlikely to Repeat in Victory of Maiden Racer.

As the clans gather at Col. Matt J. Winn's Churchill Downs there is little thought that another Sir Barton or an Exterminator will turn up and carry off the honors for the East. Sir Barton was a maiden when the racing season closed in 1918, and Exterminator was hardly heard of in November, 1917, yet both of these thoroughbreds carried off honors in their respective years as a 3-year-old.

It is expected that at least 20 will go to the post for Kentucky's blue ribbon classic, and but a small percentage of this field will carry the colors of Eastern owners. Looking over the recent form of those which performed on Old Line ovals, there is hardly one which can be given a winning chance outside of Voltear, which races for Charles T. Fisher and Admiral Carey T. Grayson. Voltear did not run in the Preakness, but he carried off the 1 1-16 miles Chesapeake Stakes at Havre de Grace in rather easy fashion, and might have equaled Victorian's record if he had been pushed. He won pulled up.

Minotaur's Strenuous Campaign May Injure His Chances.

With Dr. Freeland definitely out of the race, the only other consistent racer which did well in Maryland is Minotaur, which followed Dr. Freeland across the line in the Preakness. The former plater, which now carries the colors of John H. Thompson, jr., of Chicago, may win, but this is doubted by many on account of his long siege of racing as a 2-year-old and a strenuous campaign this year.

The Preakness shed no light on the quality or line on the running ability of the candidates, as the race was not truly run. The Nut, well thought of and stoutly backed, was in trouble throughout. The Warm Stable's candidate had carried Johnny Maiben in the saddle in all his recent victories, but on Preakness day they put Albert Johnson in the saddle in one of his come-back efforts, and he did not do nearly so well as Maiben with the horse.

Harry Payne Whitney sent Beacon Hill down from New York but Sonny Workman ruined the chances of the New York representative when he used the gat to excess and raced the horse to his downfall long before the stretch was reached. James Rowe, sr., is doubtful if Beacon Hill will start, but he has a chance, as he appeared short on Preakness day.

No Maryland Homebreds Seem Ready for the Issue.

Jacques Cohen's Essare, rejuvenated son of Light Brigade, was another Metropolitan invader that did nothing after a brilliant string of victories in New York. Battleship Gray, which races for the Glen Riddle Farm, a speedy son of Man o' War and Alice Blue Gown, ran creditably at the Graw and may furnish a surprise for the Westerners if started. Grey Coat, another sterling performer in Maryland, did not convince Samuel Ross that he should risk $500 to send him to Kentucky, and the same might be said of H. Teller Archibald's Folking. The latter is named as a sure fire starter, but he has done little to convince the public that he should be favored in such a race.

Among the homebred contingent which raced at Maryland ovals none seems to be ready for the issue with the Western horses. Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Aquastella, H. P. Whitney's Bargello, Seagram Stable's Bennish Way, Mrs. A. Vaughn's Charles I, Rancocas Stable's Donnay and Leucite, Dorwood Stable's Friar Cliff, Wheatley Stable's March Hare, and Mud, representing the Justice Farm Stable, are certain not to be sent to Kentucky, for their records were disappointing in Maryland.

Clyde Van Dusen and Boris Seen as Probable Winners.

Martin Finn's Port Harlem is on the ground, but will have to improve greatly over her Maryland efforts if the fleet daughter of The Porter is expected to figure in the running. Earl Sande is not likely to send Hermitage to the post after the miserable showing in the Preakness.

Walter J. Salmon has Black Diamond, recently out of the maiden class at Pimlico, ready and this may be his mainstay in Kentucky, with Dr. Freeland running in New York. Indications are that there will not be more than four starters from the East in the Derby, and, not forgetting Blue Larkspur, the one that wins the big stake will have to take the measure of Clyde Van Dusen and Boris, the star of the Harned Brothers racing stable.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALINE BENSINGER, $25.82, $8.42, $4.60; MORGANNA, $13.16, $6.36; PANSY WALKER, $3.98.

ALINE BENSINGER, showing a liking for the muddy footing, gradually disposed of MORGANNA first three-eighths and, continuing gamely through the stretch, was increasing her advantage. MORGANNA held on stubbornly throughout, but began tiring from early efforts and just outstayed PANSY WALKER. Latter worked her way up on the outside with a loss of ground, continued gamely when straightened out on the turn and finished courageously. VIEUX CARRE also closed strongly after being far back most of the trip.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upwards, fillies and mares. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:57. Off at 2:58. Winner, J. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALLEGIANCE, $19.32, $7.78, $6.20; TAMINA, $4.66, $3.60; THUNDER GIRL, $4.22.

ALLEGIANCE, cleverly ridden, slipped through on inside nearing far turn, came around TAMINA when hard urged through stretch and, continuing gamely, was drawing clear near end. TAMINA, benefited at the start, held command under steadying restraint, but weakened badly when put to a drive final sixteenth. THUNDER GIRL, away poorly and in close quarters first part of it, moved up strongly last quarter, but could never threaten leaders. MADAME EMELIE showed a good effort. INDIANAPOLIS was unprepared when the break came. MANUELITA retired after five-eighths.

FOURTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Haven For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:24. Winner, J. R. Devereaux's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNCLE MATT, $6.86, $3.10, $2 24; WILD WATERS, $3.30, $2.28; SURPRYSE, $2.20.

UNCLE MATT took command at once, held sway under hard pressure and when seemingly tiring a sixteenth out, came again to outstay WILD WATERS. Latter followed the winner closely to midway of the stretch, took a slight lead when hard urged and only faltered slightly. SURPRYSE moved up determinedly under punishment on inside and held on stubbornly in final drive. CHARIOT went well. ROUGHNECK and REMPLE were always far back.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $2,000; allowances. The Trial. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:35. Winner, F. M. Graham's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WINDY CITY, $5.64, $3.80, $2.76; PARAPHRASE, $11.16, $5.98; PORT HARLEM, $3.84.

WINDY CITY worked way up steadily on inside and responding gamely when called upon at head of the stretch, gradually wore leaders down. PARAPHRASE took command immediately after start, held sway until reaching main stretch, where he bore out slightly when tiring and just failed to last. PORT HARLEM was rushed into contention immediately after start, took a brief lead midway of the stretch, but faltered slightly in the final drive. NAISHAPUR, away slowly and far out of it to the stretch turns, came in between leaders when straightened out and but for bumping, might have won. LORD BRAEDALBANE closed an immense gap. THE CHOCTAW stopped badly after racing close to the leaders on the stretch turn. ERVAST was done for after reaching the stretch turn.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:29. Winner, E. B. McLan's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVERDALE, $10.04, $5 30, $4.24; SPOOKY, $43.32, $7.88; GRENADIER GUARD, $10.64.

SILVERDALE, forward under steadying restraint, moved up strongly when urged and racing NICARAGUA into defeat, held on gamely. SPOOKY safe. Latter moved up strongly rounding the turn and although continuing courageously, could not get the leader. GRENADIER GUARD, sluggish in the early stages, came with a good burst of speed when taken to outside through stretch and was going strongly at end. CASH PLAY was forced wide entire trip and could never improve position. NICARAGUA displayed usual early speed, but had nothing left when put to a drive through stretch. LEE COOPER quit after entering stretch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK ON WHITE, $8.54, $5.20, $3.26; GRAND KING, $4.76, $3.18; TUM ON, $2.80.

BLACK ON WHITE raced under a stout restraint first five-eighths and, responding gamely when ready rounding the turn, slowly wore down GRAND KING. Latter was reserved closely behind the early pace, raced TUM ON into defeat when urged, but could not withstand winner's bid near end. TUM ON set the early pace under pressure and when seemingly done for, came again near end and held on resolutely.

Fighting 3-Year-Old Bites Leader and Wins

Aurora, Ill., May 14 (A.P.).—Alto, a fighting little 3-year-old who has a habit of biting his opponent when it comes down to a hard drive to the wire, gave an exhibition of this instinct this afternoon in the fourth event when he defeated the 5-year-old Short Price by a head. In his anxiety to win Alto reached over in the final sixteenth and attempted to sink his teeth into Short Price's neck. Short Price took the place by a length from Orestes II, who finished third. This was the feature of today's program and attracted a field of eight starters.

As a result of Alto's actions today the stewards announced that his future entry would be refused. Alto paid $13.80 for a $2 mutuel ticket.

NATS DEFEAT ST. LOUIS, 9 TO 7

the Nats broke the ice in the second just when it seemed as though an opening one baser by Bluege would be put to no good use. Tate, however, came to the rescue with a double to left field on which Bluege scored standing up.

Gray retired the side in order in the third but gave West a walk, starting the next frame, and Bluege's single, a double theft with West on the front end and Cronin's infield out turned it into a run.

Rice's single and a pass to Judge was turned into the two Washington runs in the fifth. Both runners advanced on Goslin's out, and West then singled them home with a hot one past Blue. Later Bluege singled, but both were left when Cronin missed getting a homer into the right-field stands by a yard.

Browns Jolt Nats in Seventh Scoring Three Runs.

There was no further excitement until the seventh, which saw both teams up and doing with the Browns doing more. As a matter of fact, they gave the Nats quite a jolt, registering three times and having the tying runs on the acks when the final out was turned. Judge's double, a walk, West's sacrifice fly and Bluege's single had given the Nats a run in the upper half.

Then the St. Louis fun began. After Blue had walked and McGowan had singled, Cronin's error on Manush's grounder filled the sacks with none out. One run came over on Schulte's fielder's choice, Kress' single counted another, and the third was scored on O'Rourke's useful out. Liska walked Pinch Hitter Jenkins but forced Schang to fly to Goslin to end the inning.

Barrage of Hits Knocks Liska Out in Ninth.

The Nats retaliated with a two-run splurge just as soon as they came in from the field. Cronin rolled to Gray, but Hayes, who had fanned his previous three trips up, doubled to left and Tate singled him home. The latter took third on Liska's safe Texas Leaguer to center and scored when the Brannon-Kress-Blue combine failed to turn Rice's roller into a double play.

Each team rallied in the final frame. For the Nats, Goslin added two runs to the total by crashing a homer over the right field stands with Judge on first as the result of a walk, while a barrage of hits after two were out, including a four-baser by Schang, knocked Liska out of the box and gave Marberry a chance to get into the limelight by ending the game by fanning Ferrell.

EASTERN NINE DEFEATS BUSINESS IN SERIES, 29 TO 8

Winners Gain Tie for Title With Tech

Lincoln Parkers Clinch Game With 9 Runs in Second.

Championship Hinges on Clash of Leaders on Friday.

EASTERN and Business met in their high school series baseball game at the Eastern Stadium yesterday. Eastern won, as expected, but by far the greatest margin recorded yet in the series. The final score, believe it or not, was 29 to 8. Eastern and Tech clash Friday for the title.

To say that Business met defeat would be mild, as the Stenographers were literally routed from the opening inning to the last. Action was suspended in the eighth because players, coaches, fans and scorekeepers, alike, were exhausted from the overwork. The score is said to be a high school record.

Coach Guyon, taking advantage of an easy game, used about every one on his squad, including three pitchers. Twenty-one players performed, with Hanna starting on the mound, followed by Miles and then Phillips. The Business Nine used all the players it had—twelve. Eddie Leonard tried to hurl a good game, but was far from right, Joe Brown relieving him in the middle of the third inning. If Coach Woodworth had had another pitcher he might have used him, but was forced to keep Brown in there because of no one else available.

Shapiro and Cappelli Hit Successive Homers in First.

Eastern collected 20 hits altogether and scored in every inning but one, the fourth. Runs might have been registered in this inning had not Brown gotten good support from his teammates. He walked one batter, Ware, but the others were retired on fielding work by Chase, Singman and Finley.

Eastern began savagely when Shapiro and Cappelli hit home runs in succession in the first inning. Fisher, third baseman, got into the four-base class also later in the game by hitting one to deep left in the seventh.

Business did manage to get in one big inning to save itself from complete rout. Five runs were counted in the fourth inning off of Hanna. Coach Guyon quickly yanked him in favor of Miles at the start of the sixth. Phillips was given the job in the seventh for a workout. He allowed one run in the eighth.

Maryland Cubs Win From C. U. Frosh, 5-3

University of Maryland Freshmen, by defeating the hitherto undefeated Catholic University Frosh, 5 to 3, at College Park yesterday, kept their season's record perfect with seven wins and no losses.

The Old Line Cubs had to come from behind to gain the verdict, the visitors having scored twice in the first inning off Kraut, who was wild and ineffective. Hauver finished the game in great style, allowing but three scattered bingles and striking out eight. He would have been unscored on had it not been for an error by May in the ninth inning.

Chevy Chase Tourney Opens Today; Shorey Makes Ace

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE course of the Chevy Chase Club was crowded yesterday with contestants playing practice rounds preliminary to the qualification for the annual spring invitation tournament, which begins this morning. Although the course is slow, due to the recent wet weather, it is in fine condition, and low scores are expected today.

The feature of the play yesterday was the ace scored on the fourth hole by John C. Shorey, District junior champion, who had a total card of 76. Page Hufty, champion of the Congressional County Club, had 73 for his round, including birdies on the fifth and tenth holes. Albert R. MacKenzie, Columbia, had 76, and H. D. Nicholson, Washington, 78. Miller B. Stevinson, District amateur champion, broke 80 with a 79.

The entry list was increased yesterday by the receipt of several entries from the Maryland Country Club, including W. A. McPhail, J. E. McPhail, Elmer Brown, Elmer E. Reuling and Roger T. Hall. Other new entrants are Gen. C. G. Treat, Chevy Chase; R. T. Harrell, Washington; J. A. Pattison, Indian Spring, and E. O. Wagenhorst, Chevy Chase. The first pair will start at 8 o'clock this morning, and the last pair at 3:25 o'clock this afternoon.

Women's Intercity Match Postponed to May 29.

The team match between women golfers of Baltimore and Washington, originally scheduled for today on the course of the Columbia Country Club, has been postponed until Wednesday, May 29, on the same course.

Reilly, Star Central Sprinter, Is Ineligible

Jimmie Reilly, sprint star who set a record for the century dash in the Devitt meet two weeks ago, will be lost to Central High School's track and field squad for the remainder of the season, it was learned last night. Reilly failed in his studies in the advisory period just ended, Coach Bill Foley laments.

Three other Central athletes will be lost for the meet by the same route. They are Ed Milans, high jumper; Ditzler, a dash man, and Sheedy, a hurdler, all of whom were expected to figure in the scoring.

OTOMAY STAR IN TENNIS PLAY

Japanese Team Mates Say Youth Is Good Prospect.

YOSHIO OTO, least known here of Japan's Davis Cup warriors, will be a dark horse in the American zone battles next week at Chevy Chase between the Nipponese and Yankees, according to his fellow stars, Tamio Abe and Kadakazu Onda.

Oto, yet to reach the full development of his game, has just arrived from England, where he came through a stiff campaign with more than ten worthwhile victories. He did not take part in yesterday's practice.

Abe and Onda engaged in a stiff workout, which was interrupted from time to time by a dozen photographers and newspaper men.

Abe Now Nearing His Best Form After Trip Abroad.

Abe declared himself in need of strenuous practice. After attending the Davis Cup finals in Paris last summer he spent five months studying in Hamburg, Germany, during which time he never wielded a racket. He returned to this country late in the winter and resumed practice by playing in Southern tournaments. At this time he is somewhat away from peak form, but expects to be in fettle when the Americans are encountered Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

The Japanese Ambassador was host to the players at luncheon yesterday. He has subscribed to a box for the championship series.

Ross Hurls 9-4 Win For Central High Nine

Sanford Ross won another game, pitching for the Central High School Nine yesterday against Episcopal at the Central Stadium. The final score was 9 to 4. Ross, although hit freely, won with enough to spare in turning in his second victory on the mound in his last two starts. About a week ago he hurled a no-hit game against Business in the High School series.

George Brandt and Ken Fisher starred at bat by hitting home runs in addition to getting other hits. Central, in all, collected ten hits off the deliveries of three Episcopal hurlers, namely, Tilson, Mayo and Witherspoon.

Hiser's All Stars practice today on the Riverdale diamond at 6 o'clock in preparation for Sunday's game with the Kennedy A. C. All players are requested to report. Manager Hiser will direct a drill for the American Legion Juniors on the same diamond at 5 o'clock.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE RADIO AT COMMANDER BYRD'S CAMP.

(Members of the Antarctic expedition are huddled about the radio to see what they can get out of the air. It is 30 below zero. There is a terrific snowstorm outside.)

Mason (as he works the dials)—Let's see if we can get anything cheerful.

Ronne—None of those hot cabaret singers chirping those sunshine songs now.

Commander Byrd—I'll bet the first thing you get is a paddling-in-the-moonlight-with-you-oo-oo numbers. Or something about red, red roses.

Ronne—If he does I'll crack up the set. It's tough enough being down here without having to listen to a lot of nitwits warbling about the birds and bees and flowers.

Mason—Shush! I think I'm getting something faintly.

Voice over radio—And, ladies and gentlemen, when you hear the gong strike three times it will be exactly 10 minutes past 9 o'clock.

Balchen—What difference does it make?

Petersen—What we want to know is what month it is. Or what year.

Mason—Just a minute. I'm getting another station.

Voice over radio—* * * and, dear members of my unseen audience, after digging the little holes, you plant the sweet peas and morning glories in drills about 4 inches apart. Water them regularly and * * * Balchen—Another garden talk! Cut it off, cut it off!

Bursen—Let him alone; maybe he'll tune in on somebody who'll tell us all how to trim peach trees next!

Petersen (pushing Mason away and operating the set)—Lemme see what I can do—something's coming in—it's pretty weak but I'll get it better in a jiffy.

Voice over radio (from another station)—You are now listening to Blumberg's Straw Hat Hour, makers of superfine straw hats.

Balchen—Sink that guy!

Commander Byrd (coming to the rescue)—Let me work the dials. There ought to be something cheerful on the air.

Ronne—Don't forget what you got the last time, commander: a health talk on the importance of long walks in the country, avoidance of rich pastries, plenty of fresh fruit and light, loose clothing!

Voice over radio—And so, ladies and gentlemen, I take great pleasure in introducing to the radio audience at this time the hero of that remarkable experience, that unprecedented ordeal, Mr. Chester Bruce Schwackheimer, who, accidentally locked in a meat-market icebox for almost ten hours, survives to tell you the tale.

(There is a rush for the radio set. The dogs start howling. Commander Byrd prevents a disgraceful scene by pitching the set out into the snow and humming for the boys' entertainment that engaging ditty, "Button Up Your Overcoat, You Belong to Me.")

THE DES PLAINES MOSQUITO.

ONE of the best mosquito studies that I have seen is that made by the Des Plaines Valley mosquito abatement district in 1928, under its engineer, Lyell Clarke. This study showed that in the vicinity of Chicago there are at least nineteen varieties of mosquitoes. Among them is the great malaria spreader, anopheles quadrimaculatus, and one companion in crime. The yellow fever spreader was not among those present. Of the nineteen, five were classified as belonging to the group that breed in the woods, five as belonging to the marsh group, three as being of the domestic or house-breeding group. The others were not classified from this standpoint.

In the year 1928, four-fifths of the several thousand mosquitoes studied were one species of marsh breeder. But 1928 was abnormal in that the weather conditions were right for marsh breeding. A great many mosquito eggs keep fertile and ready for hatching through the winter because they are buried in mud. A moderate number of mosquitoes live through the winter in houses, particularly in warm basements. Probably many get into stumps and hollow logs and in that way survive the winter.

The hibernating mosquitoes generally leave their winter quarters and go forth in search of food some time in April. Top minnows and especially gambusia are very effective against mosquitoes in the Chicago climate in whatever ponds and waters they are suited to.

The type of mosquito which prevails in a given season depends upon the rainfall during the breeding season. The different types of season follow in cycles of some regularity.

The type of mosquito prevention campaign which should be followed is determined by the rainfall and season. Wet Aprils come at intervals of six years. The excess of moisture is not great, but it lasts for nine days. Wet Mays come at intervals of fourteen years and the wet period lasts for eight days. The excess is not great. Wet Junes come at intervals of eight years. The excess is great and the wet period averages nine days. This is the crucial month from the mosquito standpoint. Wet Julys come at eleven-year intervals. The excess is great, but it lasts only six days. Wet Augusts come at five-year intervals and are very wet. The wet spell lasts four days. The interval for September is five years and the average period is six days.

FACTORIES' OUTPUT BREAKS OLD RECORD

Reserve Board Reports New High Mark Set in Year's First Quarter.

BONDS AGAIN ARE ACTIVE

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Continued activity in industry and trade is reported in the May bulletin of the Federal Reserve Board made public yesterday, it stating that for the first quarter of 1929, output of factories and mines was larger than in any previous three-month period.

There was a continuous flow of commodities through trade channels to the consumer, and inventories, except in a few industries, showed no evidence of unusual growth, commodity prices having shown relatively small fluctuations since late last eyar.

Demand for bank credit to finance industry and trade has been reflected in rapid growth of loans for commercial purposes at member banks in leading cities, while security loans and investment holdings of these banks have declined, the bulletin states.

As a consequence of considerable gold imports, and some reduction in member bank reserve requirements, the board reports a decline in the volume of reserve bank credit outstanding; that reserve bank holdings of acceptances purchased in the open market continue to decline, and that at the end of April, they were in the smallest volume in four years, while discount for member banks increased.

Conditions in the money market remained firm and interest rates on most classes of loans showed further advances, according to the bulletin.

Investment Methods Discussed.

An investment trust of managerial type is the best qualified agency to handle the great amounts of money Americans are destined to invest in foreign enterprises, Lothrop Stoddard, economist, author, and member of the advisory board of the United Investment Assurance System, of Boston, told local men in the bond business at a luncheon, sponsored by the Bond Club of Washington and tendered by Founders Securities Trust, of Boston, at the Carlton Hotel yesterday.

Speaking on "Europe, America and Our Money," Mr. Stoddard advocated foreign investment of American money, but only through well-informed, established and intelligent mediums which are equipped to afford greatest possible safety, announcing that a safe, sound, and profitable investment method, patterned after the British system, in operation nearly 75 years, has been evolved by United Investment Assurance System.

He said this organization literally had its finger on the pulse of the world through an extraordinary network of resources, directed by experts in political, economic, and financial problems. He sees America as a great reservoir of fluid capital, with $11,000,000,000 already officially loaned to European countries, other billions loaned privately to foreign interests, and more billions prepared to flow abroad in the future.

Admitting foreign investment, with which investment trusts are concerned, offers splendid prospect of good returns, he said the undertaking was not without its perils, classifying foreign investment as a "new game" in this country, which heretofore, because of its isolation and security, had concentrated its attention and capital on domestic enterprise. Reminding his audience that this new "game" should be a profitable one, he counseled that it must be played boldly, skilfully and shrewdly or the players would be due to be badly fooled.

The principal hazard of foreign investment, according to Mr. Stoddard, is the complex political situation of foreign countries plus their unhappy attitude to this country, which has a stable government, free from revolution or invasion, and a prime consideration in domestic investment based on sound economics and good management, as contrasted with Europe's "fundamental ill" of disunion.

Individual investors, he affirmed, can not find safety in European securities without guidance and protection afforded through the managerial type of investment fund. Great Britain, he said, where the investment trust originated, faced at the close of the Napoleonic wars a situation similar to that confronting us today, and British investment trusts contributed materially to stabilization of Great Britain's finances, holding an important place in that country's financial activities during the World War.

Nathan P. Arnold, of Founders Securities Trust of Boston, management organization of the foregoing, presented a summary of the system, explained its differences from the ordinary investment trust, this being the institutional idea.

Remandment by the United States Supreme Court to a Massachusetts court for further action in the Worcester County Bank case, involving constitutionality of section 3 of the McFadden act, is considered by Federal Reserve officials and the office of the Comptroller of the Currency as a serious threat to the Federal Reserve system, the effect of the decision being to postpone final action in the case until steps which the court thinks proper are taken.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court had held unconstitutional the section of the McFadden act authorizing consolidations made up of national or State banks and trust companies to take over trustee and other fiduciary business of a State bank, the Massachusetts court holding this constituted a change of trustees.

The Supreme Court held the consolidated bank should have applied to probate court for power to act as trustees, and the case was remanded for action in accord with that opinion.

First Centralized Library.

In connection with the convention of the Special Libraries Association, now in session at the Mayflower Hotel, it is of interest to know that the American Security & Trust Co. has established a centralized library, which, company officials state incidentally, to be first of its type to be introduced locally.

They recalled that not so many years ago the thought of a library in connection with a bank would have caused surprise, while now it is an established branch of most of the banks in New York, Chicago and other large cities.

Bond Trading Is Resumed.

Following the absence of a single sale in the bonding division of the Washington Stock Exchange Monday, selling of bonds began yesterday and totaled $5,700 at the close of trading. Stock sales increased over Monday, the day's aggregate of 298 shares being an increase of 60 over the day before. A majority of stocks and bonds held to previous sale prices.

Foremost in trading volume in the stocks was National Mortgage & Investment preferred, 153 shares moving at 5¾, last sale figure. A transfer of 35 shares of Liberty National Bank, at 255, last sale figure, was the largest exchange of bank stock in days. Capital Traction 5s were the popular bond issue, there being a $4,500 turnover in these at 97¾, previous sale amount.

Loading of Revenue Freight.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended May 4 totaled 1,050,192 cars, the car service division of the American Railway Association announced yesterday. This was a decrease of 1,586 cars under the preceding week, with grain and grain products, ore and merchandise less than carload lot freight showing increases; but live stock, coal, coke, forest products and miscellaneous freight reporting decreases.

Loading of revenue freight in 1929 compared with the two previous years follows:

	1929	1928	1927
Four weeks in January..	3,570,978	3,448,895	3,756,660
Four weeks in February..	3,767,758	3,590,742	3,801,918
Five weeks in March...	4,807,944	4,752,559	4,982,547
Four weeks in April....	3,983,978	3,740,307	3,875,589
Week ended May 4	1,050,192	978,053	1,024,761
Total.....	17,180,850	16,510,556	17,441,475

The railroads of this country continue to move freight shipments with the greatest promptness ever achieved, the Bureau of Railway Economics announced yesterday. Average daily movement per freight car for March was 32.3 miles, which was an increase of 1.4 miles over the same month last year and an increase of 1.4 miles over March, 1927.

Krafft, State Mutual Life Assurance Co., president; H. Cochran Fisher, Aetna Life Insurance Co., first vice president; G. Lea Stabler, New York Life, second vice president; Alton G. Man, 24, Shoots Girl-Jilter, 13

Slayer Then Tries to End Own Life; Therats to Child Bared.

Asheville, N. C., May 14 (A.P.).—Because, according to the version given the police by witnesses, she refused to marry him, Glen Griffin, 24 years old, shot and killed Hattie Smith, 13 years old, today. Griffin was held in county jail tonight without bond.

At the jail tonight Griffin contended that he knew nothing of what occurred; he said his mind was a blank from 30 minutes before the shooting until about the same time after the girl was killed. He made an attempt on his own life after the shooting. He put the same revolver that had ended the girl's life to his head and pulled the trigger three times, but although the gun held three shells it did not fire. An inquest will be held by the coroner tomorrow morning.

Witnesses said Griffin threatened before the shooting to kill the girl unless she married him, or promised to marry him when she was old enough.

Cadets on Hunger Strike in Carolina

Entire Corps Protests at a Lack of Variety in School Menu.

Charleston, S. C., May 14.—The cadet corps of the Citadel, the military college of South Carolina, began a hunger strike this morning in protest principally against the lack of variety of food served at the school.

The entire cadet corps marched in to breakfast this morning as usual and took their accustomed seats, but refused to eat. They marched out again in order and repeated the performance when the luncheon hour arrived. During the luncheon period the cadets patronized the canteen freely, however.

Col. O. J. Bond, president of the school, stated today that Maj. W. C. Miller, commandant of cadets, is now conducting an investigation and that if the complaint on the food is sound it will be immediately rectified. Maj. E. M. Tiller, quartermaster, held a conference with the cadet majors this morning in regard to the matter, it was said.

Priest Fights Wielder Of Knife Bare-Handed

Chicago, May 14 (A.P.).—The Rev. N. Broccolo, assistant pastor of St. Dominic's Catholic Church, fought bare-handed last night in defense of a colored woman against a negro who was armed with a knife.

He came upon the negro struggling with the woman in front of the church. In the rough and tumble fight that followed the assailant, getting the worst of it, pulled a long knife. The priest, however, continued to punish him with blows until police arrived, and went to the police station to sign a complaint charging assault with a deadly weapon.

Man Acquitted of Arson After One Word Defense

Danville, Va., May 14.—Freed yesterday evening by a jury of a charge of arson, W. S. Tuck, 60 years old, textile worker, was enjoying fame today for the brevity of his defense. Taking the witness box, he remained there 30 seconds and gave utterance to one syllable. That was when he said "No" on being asked if he was guilty of the crime. Just before the case closed he performed the same feat of brevity in answer to another question.

The acquittal brought Tuck $1,600 because his insurance policies are validated by his acquittal. His two young sons, who had given the police affidavits on which the State expected to secure a conviction, wavered visibly when they realized the purport of their testimony. They either contradicted statements in the affidavits, or said they could not remember.

BISHOP DENOUNCES POLITICAL ACTIVITY OF CHURCH GROUPS

Rt. Rev. J. E. Freeman Calls Lobbying Departure From Spiritual Functions.

DIOCESAN CONVENTION OPENED BY PASTORAL

New Episcopal Buildings Held Evidence of Congregations' Progress in Capital.

Vigorous denunciation of church bodies entering into politics in this country was made by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, in his annual pastoral address delivered at the opening of the convention of the diocese of Washington in the Church of the Epiphany last night.

Bishop Freeman also denounced church lobbies maintained in Washington for influencing Congress. He declared that "the maintenance of any organized system, designed to coerce legislators or to dictate legislation, State or national, is utterly foreign to a right conception of the church's function. We have condemned, and rightly so, the influence brought by organized lobbies to affect legislation in the interest of certain corporate bodies that are seeking a selfish advantage. It is equally reprehensible for the church or any of its chosen agencies, to use like methods.

"Whenever the church, through organized effort, has attempted to direct and control political action," continued the bishop, "and thus has departed from its specific spiritual functions, it has lost prestige and signally weakened its influence. Its place as the conserver of things ethical and spiritual is undisputed. It has to do with principles rather than policies. If it lowers its standards to become an autocratic dictator in the concerns of legislative action or the choice of political candidates, it loses the respect and confidence of right-thinking men. Our age is unwilling to see the church involved in political debates and discussions, and those who indulge in such practices disqualify themselves as religious leaders. Unfortunately the chief sufferer in these matters is the church itself.

"Age of Kindlier Judgments."

"To higher ends must the church address itself, if it is to hold its place of power and influence as the conserver of the noblest and best interests of the State and Nation. We are living in a new age, of better understanding and kindlier judgments. The ties of fellowship are more closely knit and a better spirit is abroad. To halt the progress of this spirit or to seek to impair in any wise its growth, is to do violence to the highest and best interests of life."

After evening prayer had been read Bishop Freeman began reading his address to the hundreds of delegates, clerical and lay, who will attend the diocesan convention in St. Stephen's Church today. At its outset, while the congregation stood, he paid tribute to diocesan clergy who had died during the past year, including the Rev. Reginald J. Ripley, rector of Addison Parish, Seat Pleasant; the Rev. William C. Shears, late joint rector of Christ Church, Clinton, and Epiphany Church, Forestville; the Rev. Oscar L. Mitchell, rector of St. Mary's Church, Washington; the Rev. J. Townsend Russell, late canon of Washington Cathedral; the Rev. John Mitchel Page, late secretary of the College of Preachers of Washington Cathedral, and the Rev. George F. Degen, at one time associated with St. Albans Parish.

In commenting on diocesan affairs Bishop Freeman spoke of the erection in recent years of a number of parish houses in the diocese and said that they signified a growing sense of responsibility on the part of the church to provide for the spiritual nurture and enrichment of the young. He was particularly laudatory concerning the erection during the year of a new church building by St. Stephen's and Incarnation Parish, in which today's diocesan convention services will be held.

New Prayer Book Subject.

He urged upon the diocesan clergy strict adherence to the forms of the new book of common prayer adopted by the general convention of the church in Washington in October.

That the church can do much to forward the cause of world unity was set forth by the bishop and he asked that Christian unity between the churches should likewise be developed.

That the bitterness and contentions of party strife of the recent elections shocked the sensibilities of a vast majority of the people was pointed out by Bishop Freeman in his address. "That a political campaign should again revive the bitterness and contentions of party strife, and that in certain quarters it should be made the occasion for harsh and ungenerous judgments," said the bishop, "has shocked the sensibilities of a vast majority of our people. We can not believe that this spirit is to prevail, nor can we believe that it represents the opinion of more than a bare minority of our people. Nevertheless, it contains a solemn warning that must be heeded, else it may constitute a menace to those high ideals and purposes for which this great Republic stands."

The first business session of the diocesan convention will take place in the Church of St. Stephen's and Incarnation this morning.

BLIND LIKE FICTION, LIBRARIANS RECALL

Convention Delegates Discuss Improved Methods to Aid 100,000 Unfortunates.

FAVORITE AUTHORS CITED

Those who dwell in eternal darkness, the great majority of the 100,000 known blind persons in the United States, prefer to read fiction of romantic touch or background, it was learned yesterday at the joint meeting of the American Library Association with the Special Libraries Association in the Washington Auditorium.

And there are more blind people in the country today than at any time heretofore, despite the decrease of blindness at birth due to improved medical conditions, it was said.

Librarians, wherever the Braille or Moon systems are in vogue, are finding a steady increase in the number of readers, and the number of books for the blind are increasing because of the new patent process of the Braille system that allows the impression on both sides of a page. There are more Braille teachers and more Braille transcriptions of books in a wider range than heretofore.

Dickens and Scott Favorites.

Dickens and Scott have been two of the great favorites with the blind, and now many are taking to Mary Roberts Rinehart and other modern writers as they are transcribed into Braille.

The expansion work of the library was reviewed by Robert B. Irwin, of New York City, director of research and education for the American Foundation for the Blind. He told details of how the new Braille process was perfected and the advantages of it.

"The talkies are inevitable," Miss Marilla Waite Freeman, of Cleveland, gave as her opinion at the sessions. She told of a system of the Cleveland Library of "tying-in" books with the movies.

Cooperate With Movies.

The visual aids committee has agreed to preview 100 or so educational motion pictures at Hollywood a year and expects to receive the cooperation of theaters throughout the country showing such pictures. The theaters, according to J. R. Patterson, chairman of the committee, will run slides or otherwise urge the public to patronize the public libraries and secure such books as have a bearing on the visual subjects.

H. M. Lydenberg, assistant director and general supervisor of the reference department of the New York public library, urged that the proper balance of books on all subjects be maintained for the needs of all the people.

Arthur E. Bostwick, librarian of the public library of St. Louis, in speaking on "Science in Periodical Literature," said efforts made by "uninformed writers, scientific quacks and journalists in search of sensations" to popularize science does more harm than good and suggested that scientists translate their own terminology into ordinary English.

GEN. FRIES TO QUIT WITH HIGH RANKING

Former Chemical Unit Leader Will Retire Tomorrow, Spurning Colonelcy.

IN SERVICE FOR 31 YEARS

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, former chief of the Chemical Warfare Service of the United States Army, will retire tomorrow from the service, the War Department announced yesterday.

Gen. Fries requested the department to retire him. This had been anticipated in Army circles ever since he was succeeded as chief of the Chemical Warfare Service by Maj. Gen. Harry L. Gilchrist, necessitating resumption of his old rank of colonel.

At that time, Gen. Fries intimated that rather than continue in the service as a colonel he would retire, inasmuch as he could retire as a major general. He retires after 31 years of service, eight of which were spent as chief of the Chemical Warfare Service.

Gen. Fries served in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection and the World War. At various times during peace he was detailed district engineer in charge of river and harbor work in several engineering districts.

When the European War broke out he was acting director of the Engineering School at Washington Barracks. Upon the United States' entrance, he was made a brigadier general and placed in command of the chemical warfare service of the A. E. F. For his activities in this post he received the distinguished service medal.

Upon his return to the United States at the close of the war he served for a short period in the office of the the director of the Chemical Warfare Service and in command of Edgewood Arsenal and was then appointed chief of that division.

Gen. Fries is a native of Wisconsin, but he entered the Military Academy from Oregon.

GEORGETOWN BUYS UNIVERSITY TRACT

Site for New Law School Is 4 Acres in Size and Near Reservoir Road.

PLAN COLONIAL BUILDING

Georgetown University has purchased four acres of ground back of its property on Reservoir road as a future site for a new law school building in furtherance of plans of President W. Coleman Nevils for grouping all departments of the university eventually in the immediate vicinity of the college campus.

While removal of the law school from its present quarters at 506 E street northwest has been considered some time, it was said yesterday the acquisition of additional land near the medical center which the university is erecting on Reservoir road is the first definite step taken. With the acquisition of this land, a beautifully wooded triangle, the university has increased its property holdings in West Washington to 93 acres.

The new plot of land serves a double purpose. Besides affording Georgetown additional space for its future building program, it straightens off the strip of wooded land just purchased by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to extend the Glover-Archbold parkway through the Foundry Valley west of Georgetown College to Canal road.

While plans for the removal of the law school from the E street building it has occupied since 1892 are immature, it is the proposal, of President Nevils to conform the architecture of the building to the colonial or early American type.

President Nevils has in mind a structure similar, somewhat, to old Independence Hall in Philadelphia, his native city.

Desire to Fly to Moon Lands Man in Gallinger

Repeated assertions that he wanted to buy an airplane to fly to the moon brought about the arrest of Salvator Capallo, 23 years old, of New York City, yesterday.

Capallo was arrested in the Munitions Building, where he had gone, apparently, in search of his plane. He was telling employes at the Munitions Building about the plane he wanted when he was arrested by police of the Third Precinct. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

MESSAGE OF BYRD AID HALTS ADDRESS BY RADIO ENGINEER

Regret on Inability to Attend Interrupts Head of Institute, Meeting in Capital.

SPEAKERS CITE GREAT PROGRESS OF INDUSTRY

Development of Devices for Airplane Safety Urged; Television Topic.

A dramatic touch was injected at the banquet of the Institute of Radio Engineers in the Mayflower Hotel last night as A. Hoyt Taylor, president, was telling of his first experiments in radio in sending a signal across the laboratory, when a radio from the Eleanor Bolling, supply ship of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, 9,500 miles away, was received on less power than is required to burn one of the light bulbs in the banquet room.

The message was from the radio engineer with the supply ship, sending regrets he was unable to attend. The ship is lying on the southern side of New Zealand.

Mr. Taylor said that he first began experiments with the idea in 1899 and managed to send a signal across the laboratory and later from building to building on the campus of Northwestern University. When asked to lecture on the new idea, he told what had been done, but, in his youth and wisdom, predicted that the wireless never could be used for any appreciable distance.

"Now when anybody comes to me with the wildest idea," Mr. Taylor continued, "an idea that seems utterly impossible, I say, Well, I think it probably is feasible. One can not say now what is and is not possible."

Urges Airplane Devices.

Mr. Taylor urged the engineers to sacrifice work calculated for pleasure and entertainment over the radio for more utilitarian work. He stressed the need for safety development, particularly for airplanes.

"Television is still in its infancy and no man can predict where it will lead. It will find its place without interfering with radio."

Dr. Lee de Forest, inventor of the tubes bearing his name, was called upon to tell of the growth of radio.

"I think this meeting shows more about the growth of radio than I can tell," he said. "The first radio engineers' convention was held in a telephone booth, and there are more than 400 of us here tonight."

Toronto, Canada, was selected as the meeting place of the 1930 convention.

Medal and Prize Awarded.

A medal and a prize award were presented at the dinner. Prof. G. W. Pierce, electrical engineer of Harvard University, received the Institute Medal of Honor for his findings in the field of magnetism and frequency standards.

The Morris Liebmann Memorial Prize of $500 went to E. V. Appleton, professor of King's College, London, England, for investigations in the fields of radio transmission phenomena. The prize was accepted by C. J. W. Torr, second secretary of the British Embassy. A letter from Mr. Appleton regretting that he could not be present because of examinations at the college was read, and also a letter of regret from President Hoover.

The day sessions were taken up with symposiums on television and its problems and with sight-seeing trips.

Miss Ethel R. Harros, 28 years old, of 2119 Newport place northwest, yesterday was acquitted of two accusations of selling liquor and one of possession by a jury before Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court.

By the verdict the jurors discounted a claim of Isaiah Earle, police informer, that he had made a "buy" from the defendant. Miss Harros was arrested last February 9. The defense, conducted by Attorney Michael Lane, contended the liquor belonged to a woman who was acquainted with the "stool pigeon."

Nomination of Patrick Is Surprise in Capital

Hoover Picks Retired Army Officer for Utilities Board Post.

MAJ. GEN. MASON M. PATRICK.

To the list of dark-horse candidates that have been selected for local offices by President Hoover was added yesterday the name of Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, U. S. A., retired. The veteran soldier was nominated to fill the vacancy in the District Public Utilities Commission caused by the resignation of Chairman John W. Childress.

If the wiseacres were surprised by the nomination of Harleigh H. Hartman to be a member of the commission, they were stunned by the selection of Gen. Patrick. Nobody outside of the White House seems to have known that he was under consideration.

Patrick's nomination arrived at the Capitol yesterday afternoon and was referred to the Senate District committee. It is probable that it will be considered along with the nomination of Hartman.

Former Air Chief.

Gen. Patrick, an Army engineer for 41 years, last served as chief of the Air Corps. Strictly speaking, he has never had any experience with public utilities; however, he has had plenty of experience with transportation problems. At one time during the World War he was chief engineer of all lines of communication for the A. E. F., and had much to do with the efficient movement of troops and supplies.

Information concerning Gen. Patrick's views on such questions as valuation, if he has formulated any, must await his return to this city from New Haven, Conn., where he is delivering a series of lectures on "Air Transportation." He is due back Sunday. The man whom Patrick succeeds, Childress, frankly admitted when he took over his office that he knew nothing about the duties he was about to assume.

If the nominations of Gen. Patrick and Hartman are confirmed, the Public Utilities Commission will be made up of an active Army engineer, Col. W. B. Ladue, the Assistant Engineer Commissioner; a former Army engineer, and one civilian. Col. Ladue's record on the commission has been eminently satisfactory from the public standpoint.

In Line for Three-Year Term.

Although Gen. Patrick was nominated to serve the remainder of Mr. Childress' term, which expires July 1, it is the intention of President Hoover at that time to nominate him for a full three-year term.

In announcing the nomination yesterday, the White House made no mention of those who had sponsored or indorsed Gen. Patrick. The statement was limited to a biographical sketch of the nominee.

He was born in Lewisburg, W. Va., December 13, 1863; was appointed from West Virginia a cadet at the United States Military Academy, September 1, 1882, and was graduated and appointed a second lieutenant of engineers July 1, 1886.

Retired in 1927.

Working his way up through the various ranks, Patrick reached the grade of major general on June 26, 1918. He was retired with that rank on December 13, 1927.

In addition to his several assignments to duty with engineer troops and on river and harbor improvements, he served as assistant instructor of practical engineering at West Point from April, 1892, to September, 1895, and again from August, 1903, to October, 1906. He served with the Army of the Cuban Pacification as chief engineer officer and was in charge of road construction work and map work throughout the island.

From July to December, 1911, he was engaged in directing the task of raising the battleship Maine in Havana Harbor. In 1916 he came here to take command of the Engineer School at the Washington Barracks, remaining a year. Then in 1917 he went to France as chief engineer officer of the S. O. S. and director of construction and forestry. From May, 1918, to July, 1919, he was chief of the A. E. F. Air Service. Two years later he was made chief of the entire Army Air Service.

Mrs. Leutenschlager was reported to have a possible fractured skull and severe contusions. Chances of her recovering are slight, physicians said.

The woman was struck down yesterday afternoon at Fourteenth and Hamilton streets northwest when she was walking from a street car to the curb. She is reported to have altered her course on reaching the curb and stepped back into the street. The left fender of Redding's car struck her, according to the report. No charges had been placed against the policeman.

New School Plan Approved by City

Structure to Be Built on Upshur Street at Cost of $165,900.

Plans for a new eight-room elementary public school were approved yesterday by the District Commissioners. The plans were submitted by S. B. Walsh, acting municipal architect, and transmitted to the commissioners by Maj. L. E. Atkins, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

The new school is to be constructed on the south side of Upshur street northwest, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, and, it is estimated, will cost $165,900. It will occupy the site of the home of the superintendent of the Tuberculosis Hospital, whose residence will be moved. The whole job, it is estimated, will cost approximately $179,000.

The new school will have eight rooms, including a combination gymnasium and assembly hall and is one of the schools provided for in the original five-year school building program. The original proposal was to build a new school in the vicinity of Fourteenth and Ogden streets, but an adequate site was not available at a reasonable cost. Another school was proposed for Sixteenth and Webster streets. The new school will take the place of those two.

DRASTIC PERSONAL CONDUCT RULE FOR SCHOOLS LOOMING

Proposal to Deny Diplomas to Disobedient Pupils Put Before Board.

"SKIPPING" AND DIRTY CLOTHES ARE CITED

Matter Is to Be Taken Up at Meeting in June; No Opposition Seen.

The most drastic rule ever sponsored by school authorities, giving the Board of Education the right to withhold the diploma of any student in the junior, senior high, or normal schools, found guilty of immoral conduct, indecent language, violent or pointed opposition to authority, persistent disobedience or disorder, dishonesty, habitual tardiness, unauthorized absence, or uncleanliness of person or clothing, is expected to be adopted without opposition at the June meeting of the board.

It had been hoped that the recommendation for adoption of the rule could be made at today's meeting of the Board of Education in the Franklin Building, but several members of the board most interested in the rule were unable to attend a meeting last Friday at which the matter was to be considered, so action on the rule was postponed until the June meeting of the board.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, chairman of the personnel committee of the board, is sponsor of the proposed rule. A diploma from a public school attests to the honorable completion of a course of study, and, inasmuch as character training should be an inherent result of the completion of every educational program in a public school, Mrs. Smith believes the board should have the right to withhold a diploma from any student found guilty of any one of the above-mentioned offenses.

Under the proposed rule, any student found guilty of any of these violations would be subject to having his or her diploma withheld at graduation, despite the fact that such student may have earned all necessary credits in studies prescribed for graduation.

School officials feel that the new rule would put an immediate stop to the numerous cases of unauthorized absences, "skipping," as the students call it, which are brought to their attention nearly every day. At the present time there is no way open to school officials to punish "skipping" or other of the "offenses" embodied in the proposed rule.

Blind Man Freed In Shooting Case

Wounding of Policeman Who Answered "Help" Call Accident, Claim.

After five minutes' deliberation a jury acquitted William Lawson, 60 years old, blind colored man, of a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon upon Patrolman Allan A. Baker, of the Sixth Precinct, yesterday before Justice Frederick L. Siddons in criminal branch of the District Supreme Court.

Baker was wounded in the right arm when he and other officers invaded Lawson's home, 825 New Jersey avenue northeast, in the early morning of February 12. The policemen were summoned to the place on a report that some one was calling "Help, murder, police." According to testimony, the police informed Lawson that "everything was all right" when they entered the house, but Baker was shot a few moments later. A double-barreled shotgun was taken from Lawson.

The blind man testified the shooting was accidental. He said some one was robbing his home when he called for help and when the police arrived one of them struck his arm, causing the gun he held to explode and wound Baker. Lawson was defended by Attorneys Bertrand Emerson, Jr., E. Russel Kelly and Harold Stevenson, while Assistant District Attorney Joseph V. Connolly appeared for the prosecution. Following his acquittal, the colored man was sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation and treatment upon recommendation of his counsel.

Widespread Search Begun For Marine Who Fled Jail

Patrol Covering Highway From Washington to Richmond in Effort to Recapture Man Under Charge as Deserter; Motorists Are Warned.

Search for Ezekiel Nozash, 22 years old, a marine charged with desertion, who escaped from the prison at Quantico early yesterday morning, had been extended last night along the entire highway from Washington to Richmond.

Marines, stationed along the road from the National Capital to the Virginia capital, were spending an all-night vigil, looking out for the fugitive and warning motorists not to pick up a man who resembled the runaway. Motorists were advised that if they saw anyone of this kind to speed on to the nearest marine and notify him.

Nozash, according to information obtained at the Quantico Marine headquarters, gained liberty when he was assigned to clean up trash at the officers headquarters. "He ran off when the guard was looking the other way," an official said over long distance telephone. His escape was noticed at 8:40 o'clock yesterday morning. Search for the alleged deserter was immediately instituted. Marines took up their posts along the highway during the day, and this patrol was continued throughout the night.

Nozash, a Pole, is described as dark-haired and brown-eyed. He was wearing dungarees, with "P's" printed on the back and front of the legs. He is 22 years old. He was being held for a general court-martial trial on charges of desertion.
